Complete Website Audit

This audit is a read-only reconstruction reference for the Faculty of Business Studies and Finance (FBSF) WordPress site. It combines the local WordPress source, the SQL backup `fbsf_mariadb.sql`, and files under `wp-content\uploads`.

Evidence and limits

• Database source: `fbsf_mariadb.sql` (about 83.6 MB; file timestamp 2026-10-26). SQL counts and IDs cited below refer to that snapshot.

• Source code: local WordPress core, the Kingster theme at `wp-content\themes\themes\kingster`, and plugin directories under `wp-content\plugins`. The active theme option is `kingster`, but no theme directory exists at the conventional direct path `wp-content\themes\kingster`; the active-plugin option also names `advanced-nocaptcha-recaptcha`, whose directory is absent locally.

• Media: 883 physical files exist under `wp-content\uploads`; the database contains 1,511 attachment records, of which 1,466 referenced original files are absent from this local media tree.

• Live rendering was not verifiable. HTTPS to `https://fbsf.wyb.ac.lk` failed with a certificate-name error; the HTTP check redirected to the unrelated ASBIRES site. No page appearance or behavior is claimed as browser-observed.

• The legacy content-documentation Markdown and PDF are absent from the working tree. The staged Markdown index was inspected read-only; its referenced `website_documentation\` tree is absent, and the staged PDF was not extracted. Neither staged file was restored or modified.

• Findings distinguish database/source facts from unavailable runtime observations. Missing values are marked rather than invented.

Website Overview

Identity

Field	Finding	Evidence
Name	Faculty of Business Studies and Finance	fbsf_options: blogname; fbsf_mariadb.sql
Description	FBSF	fbsf_options: blogdescription; fbsf_mariadb.sql
Main domain in backup	https://fbsf.wyb.ac.lk	siteurl and home options
Front page	WordPress page ID 2039, titled Homepage	show_on_front=page, page_on_front=2039
Purpose	Faculty information, academic departments and programmes, student resources, research publications, news, events, and staff information	Published page titles, custom post types, menus, theme builder data
Parent institution	Wayamba University of Sri Lanka	Footer widget content and page/menu content

The site is a WordPress academic faculty website. The SQL backup sets the front page to the `Homepage` page and uses the `/%postname%/` permalink structure.

Verified inventory totals

Counts are SQL/filesystem counts, not counts of live-rendered pages.

Inventory	Count
Published pages	156
Other page records (draft, private, trash)	10
Published standard posts	72
Published courses	10
Published personnel records	66
Published portfolio records	9
Published Events Calendar events	2
WordPress menu definitions (nav_menu terms)	19
Menu-item posts	177
Distinct non-empty menu IDs assigned in saved menu options	2
Local files under uploads	883
Local image files under uploads	851
Local PDF files under uploads	12
Raster/GIF files in the Kingster theme image directory	34
SVG files under wp-content (theme/plugin assets)	2,354
Attachment records in the database	1,511

Inventory	Count
Attachment paths with no corresponding local file	1,466
GoodLayers background-section nodes on published pages	247

The 2,354 SVG count includes theme/plugin code assets and is not an upload-library or page-media count.

Sources inspected

- WordPress source and site configuration structure (configuration values are not copied into this audit).
- Database backup `fbsf_mariadb.sql`.
- Kingster theme source and generated theme CSS.
- GoodLayers Core, Course, Personnel, and Portfolio plugin source.
- Active plugin list stored in the database.
- Local plugin/theme directory layout, checked against the active options stored in the database.
- Physical upload tree.
- Browser access attempts to the configured site domain, which did not yield the FBSF site.

The audit does not presume that the SQL snapshot, source tree, and current hosted deployment are in sync.

Archives and non-page routes

Published posts, courses, personnel, portfolios, and Events Calendar entries are cataloged in dynamic content analysis. WordPress/ theme code supplies archive, search, and 404 routes; live behavior was not verified.

Global Design System

Evidence status

The values below come from the Kingster theme options serialized in `fbsf_mariadb.sql` and the generated `wp-content\themes\themes\kingster\css\style-custom.css`. They represent configured CSS tokens, not a measurement of a currently rendered page.

Colors

Role	Value	Evidence
Primary navy	#192f59	Theme color option; top-bar and course-search section settings
Navigation text	#163269	main-menu-text-color
Accent green	#3db166	Theme hover/accent settings; builder content
Body text	#6b6b6b	body-content-color
Headings	#161616	heading-color
Main background	#ffffff	body-background-color and header background
Submenu background	#eeeeee	sub-menu-background-color
Footer background	#181818	footer-background-color
Footer text	#ababab	footer-content-color
Footer headings	#ffffff	footer-title-color
Copyright band	#202020	copyright-background-color
Divider	#e6e6e6	divider-color
Links	#545454; hover #60c988	Theme color settings

Page-builder sections may override global colors. The homepage contains explicit `#192f59` backgrounds and `#339966` inline text styling; preserve those per-page settings separately from global tokens.

Typography

Use	Configuration
Headings	Poppins; H1 52px, H2 48px, H3 36px, H4 28px, H5 22px, H6 18px
Body/content	Poppins, 16px, line-height 1.7
Navigation	Poppins, 16px, weight 500
Quote	ABeeZee
Footer title	17px, weight 700
Footer content	16px

Use	Configuration
Copyright	15px, weight 400

Mobile heading/content sizes are configured as empty values; resulting browser defaults or inherited sizes were not measured.

Layout and spacing

- Theme layout: full.
- Main container max width: 1360px.
- Container side padding: 20px.
- Header/top-bar content width: boxed, 1140px.
- Logo maximum width: 330px; mobile logo maximum width: 180px.
- Logo vertical padding: 10px top and 9px bottom.
- Top-bar vertical padding: 18px top and bottom.
- Global item padding: 20px.
- Kingster custom CSS includes a responsive rule at max-width 999px.

No live measurements were possible for actual rendered section widths, column ratios, margins, border radii, shadows, or animation timing. Page-specific data may define additional spacing.

SOURCE FILE 04_header_analysis.md

Header Analysis

Source-derived configuration

The Kingster `header.php`, header templates, theme options, menu-location assignments, and page options define the header. No FBSF page was successfully rendered in the browser during this audit.

Element	Configured or recorded value
Header style	Plain
Background	Solid white (#ffffff)
Width	Boxed, 1140px
Logo	Attachment ID 6103 (wp-content/uploads/2020/10/logo-3.png); stored dimensions 544 x 122px; maximum rendered width configured as 330px
Logo spacing	10px top, 9px bottom
Top bar	Enabled on desktop and mobile; boxed width 1140px; 18px top/bottom padding
Main navigation	Theme location main_menu; assigned menu ID 120 (Main Navigation)
Mobile navigation	Theme location mobile_menu; assigned the same menu ID 120
Sticky navigation	Enabled in theme settings
Sticky logo	Enabled
Search	Enabled in main/mobile header templates
Social links	Top-bar social feature enabled, but configured social URL values are blank
Top-bar custom text/button	Empty in theme settings
Secondary menu	Theme location exists; no menu assigned (right_menu=0)
Top-bar menu location	Registered by theme; no location assignment recorded

The `Top Bar Menu` menu exists in the database but is not assigned to a theme location in the `theme_mods_kingster` option. Its presence does not prove that it is displayed.

Desktop/mobile implementation

The mobile template (`header/header-mobile.php`) can render the top bar, a left-aligned logo, search, a hamburger-triggered menu, and a sticky mobile header. The mobile logo limit is 180px. A cart control is conditional on WooCommerce being available; WooCommerce is not in the database's active plugin list.

The logo's stored original is absent from the local uploads tree, so the 544 x 122px dimensions come from database attachment metadata rather than local image inspection. Header height, menu dropdown appearance, hover behavior, sticky transition, and mobile interaction were not runtime-measured. Recover the original logo and confirm rendered behavior against the production site before reconstruction.

SOURCE FILE 05_footer_analysis.md

Footer Analysis

Source-derived structure

The theme is configured with `footer-style=footer-3`, enabled footer and copyright, left/right copyright alignment, no fixed footer, and no back-to-top button. In `footer.php`, `footer-3` provides three columns with theme column classes `15 / 15 / 30`.

The `sidebars_widgets` option records footer widgets for:

1. `footer-1`: a text widget with the white FBSF logo and contact details.
2. `footer-2`: a GoodLayers custom-menu widget titled `Our University`.
3. `footer-3`: a custom HTML widget titled `Google Map`, embedding a Wayamba University of Sri Lanka map iframe.
4. `footer-4`: another custom-menu widget, not part of the selected three-column `footer-3` layout.

The widget assignment and layout are database evidence; live visibility was not verified.

Contact content in the footer text widget

```text
Faculty of Business Studies and Finance,
Wayamba University of Sri Lanka,
60200, Kuliyapitiya,
Sri Lanka.
Tel : +94 37-2284215
Email : bsfoffice@wyb.ac.lk

The widget references `wp-content/uploads/2020/10/FBSF_logo_white.png` (attachment ID 6106; stored dimensions 544 x 122px). The original file is absent from the local uploads tree; its dimensions come from database metadata. See the media inventory.

Footer tokens

- Background `#181818`.
- Footer headings `#ffffff`.
- Footer content `#abababa`.
- Footer links `#8d8d8d`; hover `#ffffff`.
- Copyright background `#202020`.

Navigation Analysis

The database has 19 nav_menu terms and 177 published menu-item posts. Kingster registers main, secondary, top-bar, and mobile menu locations.

Saved menu assignments

Saved location/key	Menu ID	Menu name
main_menu	120	Main Navigation
mobile_menu	120	Main Navigation
gm_primary	170	DeptofInsurance
right_menu	0	(no matching menu)

The two non-empty menu IDs are 120 and 170; the main and mobile locations share menu 120. `gm_primary` is present in the saved options but is not one of the four locations registered by the inspected Kingster theme source, so its rendering owner is unverified. The `Top Bar Menu` is a defined menu but has no saved location assignment.

Nevertheless, this has proved to be quite a challenge for most develop-ing countries due to inefficient and ineffective performance in prevailing waste management practices. Therefore, this study aims to contribute to filling this gap by exploring the intricacies of waste management practices within the LGAs in the Southern Province of Sri Lanka, specifically focusing on their alignment with the concepts of sustainable waste management. A mixed-method approach was used to collect data from 41 LGAs in the southern province of Sri Lanka. First, a questionnaire was distributed among all LGAs to collect data on specific waste management practices. In addition, semi-structured interviews, focus groups, in-formal discussions, and document analysis were conducted to gain insights and identify trends in current waste management practices. The findings demonstrate favourable advancements in initiatives like awareness campaigns that engage citi-zens in the source separation of waste. However, the waste collection procedure encounters considerable obstacles stemming from shortages in staff and vehicles, leading to a substantial volume of uncollected waste. Further, it was revealed that disparities across LGAs in the collection of non-degradable waste are attributable to uneven financial resource allocation, inadequate regulation, disorganized collec-tion schedules, and a lack of technical competency. Despite notable measures like boosting home gardening and organic fertilizer production to address environmen-tal issues, these measures were undermined owing to insufficient enthusiasm and backing from political and administrative leadership. Another significant finding is that political leadership frequently diverts a portion of the budget allocated for waste management to other development projects, raising concerns about the seri-ousness of addressing waste management issues. The findings of this study advo-cate for increased transparency and accountability in the allocation of public funds and provide policymakers with several key measures to improve infrastructure, strengthen regulations, and enhance citizen engagement. Implementing these measures is crucial for advancing a circular economy and achieving sustainability goals. / Keywords: Sustainable waste management, Local Government Authorities, Citzen Involvement, Recycling, Sri Lanka

Despite the fact that the number of reports has increased, their quality has been questionable. Moreover, the credibility of sustainability information without assurance is frequently criticized. According to SR practice, external assurance provides stakeholders with transparency and credibility of sustainability information. Although sustainability reporting assurance (SRA) is still a vital activity, there is a lack of a shared understanding and approach to the practice. The objective of the study is to explore the current SRA practices and the prospects for SRA by conducting a systematic literature review (SLR). Through the SLR using the PRISMA framework, 55 published articles in the last 17 years, from 2004 to 2020, were carefully examined. The predetermined data elements such as year of publication, country of study, research method, focus of literature, and analytical approaches were analyzed using a chronological and content analysis of these articles. This methodology employs a rigorous process to identify and select the most important literary contributions in this field. The results are intended to contribute to the development and evolution of SRA in the future, as well as guide researchers in designing their future studies. / Keywords- Sustainability Reporting; Sustainability Reporting Assurance; Assurance Quality; Systematic Review; PRISMA

• Extracted text (content): As the pioneer academic center in risk & insurance education in Sri Lanka, the Department of Insurance and Valuation is committed to developing its stakeholders' competencies through education, training, research, and other outreach programmes to more effectively manage the challenges in the fields of risk, insurance, and finance. The Department is also committed to pursuing excellence in teaching and learning in Risk, Insurance, and Finance by conducting research and community services while making all efforts to contribute to the vision of the Faculty of Business Studies and Finance. / The Department of Insurance and Valuation has positioned its name in the insurance industry by successfully conducting educational programmes for internal and external students. The Diploma in Risk Management & Insurance and the Higher Diploma in Risk Management & Insurance are the most successful and highly recognized academic programmes conducted by the Department for external students engaged in the insurance industry in Sri Lanka. Further, aligning with the vision & mission, the Department of Insurance and Valuation acts as an academic partner of leading insurance companies in Sri Lanka. / According to the official data published by IRCSL, at present, there are 28 insurance companies selling life and/or general insurance products, while 63 insurance brokers and 44,919 insurance agents work as their sales channels. Besides the insurance companies' product training programme, no well-established and inter-connected academic programme is developed to get the essential theoretical and practical knowledge to perform in the insurance salesforce. As the pioneer academic center in insurance education in Sri Lanka, the Department of Insurance and Valuation addresses this national and industry requirement by introducing well-developed educational programmes for the employees working in the insurance industry and risk management field in Sri Lanka. Accordingly, the Advanced Certificate in Insurance Salesmanship programme aims to address the candidates who provide financial advice, act as insurance agents, or aspire to do both, including customer operations back-office staff and contact center team leaders. Therefore, by introducing this course, the Department of Insurance and Valuation aims to ensure that the insurance practitioners who provide advice and/or sell life, pensions, investment, personal, and commercial general insurance products possess the requisite basic knowledge of the insurance concepts, principles and market practices to be able to perform their jobs competently and ethically. / Further, this programme will be one of the windows to the academic programme ladder of the Department of Insurance and Valuation introduced for external students. Those who have completed the Certificate in Insurance Salesmanship will be eligible to claim two subject exemptions in the Diploma in Risk Management and Insurance of the Wayamba University in Sri Lanka.

It is a free type of advertising brought by consumers' perceptions, sentiments, and ideas. The purpose of this study is to explore the impact of rapport, source similarity, source attractiveness, trust, and physical evidence on mobile phone purchasing intention. The research design was analytical for this study. The population of mobile phone users was targeted to survey. The study was conducted among 199 respondents within Kathmandu Valley. The respondents were chosen at the mobile shop using a convenience sampling technique. Quantitative data was used in nature, and the main source of information for the study was primary data. A questionnaire with a five-point Likert scale has been made to collect the needed data and information. Respondents were given 250 questionnaires, but only 210 were sent back. 199 of them were valid and were put into the SPSS spread sheet. Data was analyzed and interpreted using statistical methods like descriptive statistics such as mean, standard deviation and inferential statistics as independent sample t test, correlation, and regression. According to the study's findings, rapport, source similarity, source attractiveness, trust, and physical evidence all had an impact on mobile purchasing intention. The findings also revealed that trust and physical evidence had an impact on mobile phone purchase intentions. However, rapport, source similarity, and source attractiveness did not significantly affect the purchase intentions. In addition, researchers can study the causative factors of the purchase decision and analyze the effect of demographic variables on word of mouth and purchase intention. / Keywords: Purchase intention, Rapport, Source similarity, Source attractiveness Physical evidence, and Trust .

But there are limited studies conducted to explore the factors affecting the career success of employees in the insurance industry in Sri Lanka. To address this gap, the current researcher conducted a study with the primary goal of identifying the factors that influence the career success of both executive and non-executive employees in the Sri Lankan insurance industry. A survey was conducted among 102 respondents selected among the both executives and non-executive employees currently working in the insurance industry of Sri Lanka using a structured questionnaire to gather primary data. The relationship between work-life balance, job stress, job satisfaction, job retention, and career success was analyzed using the regression analysis. As per the results of the regression analysis, work-life balance, job satisfaction, and job retention are positively associated with career success, while job stress has a negative impact. The findings highlight the importance of supportive organizational policies and practices in enhancing career success. Job satisfaction emerged as a key motivator for employees to remain with their organizations, thereby providing the stability required for career advancement. Work-life balance was found to be crucial for maintaining employee well-being and productivity, while job retention was essential for fostering long-term career growth. Conversely, high levels of job stress were detrimental to career success, indicating the need for effective stress management strategies within organizations. Based on these insights, the study recommends that insurance companies in Sri Lanka prioritize initiatives aimed at improving work-life balance, reducing job stress, increasing job satisfaction, and fostering job retention. By addressing these factors, companies can create a supportive and productive work environment that promotes the growth and success of both executive and non-executive employees, ultimately contributing to the overall success of the industry. / Keywords: Career success, Job stress, Job satisfaction, Job retention, Work life balance

The four main concepts and applications of the audit were tested in this study. They are the auditor's responsibilities, audit reliability, key audit matters (KAM) & auditing standards (AS), and usefulness of audited financial statements for decision-making. The population of the study is public university academics in the field of accounting and finance, and independent external auditors in Sri Lanka. The researcher used a developed Likert five-point scale questionnaire to collect data from academics and auditors for the study. The developed questionnaire was distributed among 100 academics and external auditors, and 64 responses were received in this study. Descriptive and inferential analyses were performed in this study. Descriptive statistics confirmed that there is an expectation gap between academics and auditors in Sri Lanka. ANOVA and independent sample test confirmed that there is an expectation gap between academics and students, but there is no significant expectation gap. They have a high level of expectation gap regarding key audit matters and auditing standards application, on the other hand, they have a low level of expectation gap on audited financial statements usage in decision making when compare to standard or expected. There is a high level of expectation gap regarding the key audit matters and auditing standards application between auditors and academics in Sri Lanka, however, there is a low level of expectation gap regarding audit reliability between auditors and academics in Sri Lanka. The results of the study highlight that there is audit expectation between auditors and academics in Sri Lanka. Consequently, the AEG in the public sector has been the subject of only a small number of studies, all of which have been carried out pertaining to the financial or performance audit contexts. Subsequently, numerous scholars have defined and assessed the AEG in a variety of ways in a variety of studies using a variety of parameters. The main purpose of this paper is to develop a new synthesis of the extensive literature on the AEG concerning the public sector. Moreover, this study examines the literature on AEG definitions and meanings, diverse dimensions employed to measure AEG, various methodologies used, the reasons for AEG, and mechanisms for narrowing the gap. The relevant articles were mainly selected using related keywords namely “audit expectation gap” and “audit expectation-performance gap” blended with “public sector”, “government sector” or “performance audit” from the Google Scholar search engine and three selected databases from 1974 to 2021, as suggested by Quick (2020). The dominance of the quantitative method within the positivistic approach was found in the examination of the AEG in the Public Sector. Moreover, the Mann-Whitney U test was found to be the predominant analytical method in empirical studies that primarily utilized questionnaire surveys for data collection. The ""society"" side in the samples has been extraordinarily diverse, whereas the ""auditor"" end has always been dominated by the Auditor Generals. Further, AEG in the public sector is a multifaceted concept. Multiple causes for the AEG and various approaches to minimizing it in the public sector have been presented. As far as the originality of the study is concerned, this is the first time a literature review on AEG was performed in the public sector context. Further, all of the facets of AEG have been addressed, and research gaps and potential issues for future studies in the public sector are highlighted. Eventually, / a novel definition was developed, contributing originality to the existing public sector literature on AEG. / Keywords: Audit Expectation Gap, Auditing, Literature Review, Public-Sector, Public-Sector Auditing

It is necessary to do a bankruptcy evaluation so the businesses can receive early bankruptcy warning signs. The earlier signs of insolvency are identified, the better for management because they can take immediate action to correct the issue. This paper aims to investigate the impact of bankruptcy prediction on firm performance with involving COVID -19 pandemic with a focus on listed mainboard-hotel companies in Sri Lanka while referring current Sri Lanka’s economic crisis. When there is a financial crisis, it is crucial to choose a model for bankruptcy prediction. The study uses semi-annual secondary data to examine a sample of 12 mainboard-hotel companies listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange from year 2016 to 2022. Altman's and Kida Z-scores are the bankruptcy prediction models used to measure bankruptcy. According to the findings, there are seven safe zone hotel companies, three hotel companies are in grey zone and two are recognized as distressed. Return on equity, return on assets and employee productivity were used to construct independent variables. The study also discovered that the profitability and liquidity ratios could foretell the insolvency of mainboard-hotel companies listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange. The findings of the study examined the comparison between model estimations of the study and the actual status of the firms. The study showed the Altman's and Kida Z-scores classification models have 89.6% and 69.5% accuracy for the average predictive ability of business discontinuation, respectively. Overall Altman’s Z-score is better than the Kida model as most of the hypotheses have been proved and prediction rates are in a good position. The variables have a statistically significant association between bankruptcy risk. It is necessary to do a bankruptcy evaluation so the businesses can receive early bankruptcy warning signs. The earlier signs of insolvency are identified, the better for management because they can take immediate action to correct the issue. This paper aims to investigate the impact of bankruptcy prediction on firm performance with involving COVID -19 pandemic with a focus on listed mainboard-hotel companies in Sri Lanka while referring current Sri Lanka’s economic crisis. When there is a financial crisis, it is crucial to choose a model for bankruptcy prediction. The study uses semi-annual secondary data to examine a sample of 12 mainboard-hotel companies listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange from year 2016 to 2022. Altman's and Kida Z-scores are the bankruptcy prediction models used to measure bankruptcy. According to the findings, there are seven safe zone hotel companies, three hotel companies are in grey zone and two are recognized as distressed. Return on equity, return on assets and employee productivity were used to construct independent variables. The study also discovered that the profitability and liquidity ratios could foretell the insolvency of mainboard-hotel companies listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange. The findings of the study examined the comparison between model estimations of the study and the actual status of the firms. The study showed the Altman's and Kida Z-scores classification models have 89.6% and 69.5% accuracy for the average predictive ability of business discontinuation, respectively. Overall Altman’s Z-score is better than the Kida model as most of the hypotheses have been proved and prediction rates are in a good position. The variables have a statistically significant association between bankruptcy risk. Therefore, all objectives have been achieved in the study.Keywords: Altman’s Z-score, Bankruptcy Prediction, Colombo Stock Exchange, Kida Model, Mainboard Hotel Companies.

Boloupremo, T. / Department of Banking and Finance, University of Africa, Toru-Orua / Bayelsa State, Nigeria / tboloupremo@gmail.com / ORCID: 0000-0002-3605-0953 / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1122408 / ABSTRACT / The study aims to investigate the impact of digital financial technology in bridging the financial inclusion gap between 2011 and 2022. Specifically, the study examined how digital financial technologies such as internet banking, point of sale terminals and automated teller machines have facilitated access to appropriate and affordable financial services, such as savings, loans, insurance, and payments, for all segments of Nigerian society. By utilizing secondary data from the Central Bank of Nigeria and the Nigeria Inter-Bank Settlement System (NIBSS), the study employs descriptive and econometric techniques to analyze the impact of these digital financial services (DFS) channels on financial inclusion. The findings suggest that while point of sale (POS) terminals have a significant positive impact on financial inclusion, the influence of automated teller machines (ATMs) and internet banking is less pronounced. The government, in collaboration with network providers, should invest in improving network infrastructure to support the widespread adoption of internet banking. Banks should complement these efforts by conducting educational campaigns to familiarize customers with digital banking services. Policymakers should also prioritize strategies to expand the availability of Automated Teller Machines (ATMs) in both urban and rural areas. Additionally, improvements in network connectivity and the ATM's capacity to dispense cash are essential. Policymakers can leverage these insights to develop targeted policies that promote the growth of these financial services, particularly in areas where access is limited. / Keywords: Digital finance, Financial inclusion, Nigeria, Central Bank

The study explores the various components of capital formation decisions such as debt to equity ratio, debt to asset ratio, short term to asset ratio, and short-term equity to asset ratio while earnings per share and market capitalization were control variables. The finding revealed that capital formation variables, particularly debt to asset and debt to equity exhibit negative aftermath on the financial accomplishment of commercial banks in Nigeria. This suggests that higher levels of debt, especially in relation to equity and assets, are linked to lower returns on both assets and equity. The study further uncovered that short-term debt has a particularly detrimental effect on accomplishment, likely due to its liquidity challenges and potential impact on operational flexibility. The key takeaway from this study is the significance of carefully managing capital formation to achieve optimal firm performance. While debt financing can support growth, excessive reliance on debt, particularly short-term debt, can be harmful. The study provides insights for policymakers, banking executives, and investors on the importance of managing capital structure to enhance the financial performance of banks, especially amidst macroeconomic challenges. / Keywords: Capital formation, firm performance, debt/equity, return-on-asset, return-on-equity

Anandasayanan1* / / 1Department of Financial Management / / University of Jaffna / / Sri Lanka / / 1asayan@univ.jfn.ac.lk / / ABSTRACT / / Corporate governance is a system that includes the rules and regulations that stakeholders of companies should obey. Investment efficiency refers to how well a firm uses its resources, including capital and labor, to make profitable investments while effectively managing associated risks. The main purpose of this survey is to measure the effect of corporate governance practices implemented by the financial sector on investment efficiency. Fifty financial institutions listed under the financial sector in the Colombo Stock Exchange are randomly selected for this study and the data for the study covers the period from 2017 to 2022. In order to analyze the investment efficiency of the financial sector, return on Assets was used. In addition, to measure the corporate governance, board composition, size of the audit committee, number of meetings and board size were considered as explanatory variables. To analyze the data, the panel data regression analysis was exercised. As per the results, it is quite obvious that the board composition and board meetings have a major impact on the efficiency of investment in the financial sector. These findings depict that, the financial institutions precisely build the board committee in association with independent directors and they conduct meetings to implement the proper plans, in which both of these lead to increase in the investment efficiency. On the other hand, audit committee and board size do not have statistical significance. These findings imply that neither the audit committee size nor the board size has a meaningful impact on investment efficiency. By ensuring the presence of a liaison between corporate governance practice and investment efficiency, the financial sector should adopt the corporate governance requirements suggested by code of best practices in Sri Lanka. When firms adopt corporate governance practices, this implies that those firms are acting on a best interest of the stakeholders. / / Keywords: Audit Committee, Board Meeting, Board Size, Board Composition and Panel Data.

While stakeholder and reputation-building theories suggest that CSR can affect organizational performance, slack resource theory proposes organizational performance can affect CSR. Accordingly, it indicates that CSR initiatives and firm performance have a bidirectional relationship. Despite many unidirectional studies conducted to examine CSR and firm performance interplay in diverse contexts, studies on bidirectional analyses to test contrasting theoretical standpoints in a single study are rare. However, examining the bi-directional role of CSR is crucial as it provides insights into using CSR as a strategic investment decision within the competitive organizational context. Therefore, this study aims to examine the relationship between CSR and market-based performance as a bidirectional study from an emerging country perspective. Study data was collected from the sustainability/CSR disclosures in annual reports published between 2011 and 2020 by the top hundred companies (identified based on market capitalization) listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE) in Sri Lanka using judgmental sampling. The CSR was measured using a weighted CSR score assessed based on a comprehensive CSR index with thirty sub-dimensions. Market-based performance was measured using earnings per share (EPS) and firm value, and the control variables were firm size and leverage. The data was analyzed in two phases to examine the two-way linkage between CSR and market-based performance using the fixed effect panel regression technique. The findings concluded that CSR positively impacts market-based performance, confirming the role of CSR as a strategic driver to enhance future profitability. However, the study could not find any bidirectional impact of market-based performance on CSR in an emerging context. Although higher CSR affects higher external performance, higher market-based performance does not affect increased CSR in Sri Lanka. It may be because external performance indicators represent only the future profitability of firms, and these indicators are generally highly volatile over a long period, especially in emerging countries like Sri Lanka. / Keywords: Bi-directional, Corporate social responsibility, Market-based performance, Slack resource theory, Stakeholder theory

A quantitative approach was adopted, utilizing a longitudinal research design. Secondary data was drawn from the annual reports of the companies covering a period starting from 2014 to 2023. The population consisted of twenty-one consumer goods firms listed on the Nigerian Exchange Group, out of which nineteen firms were selected using purposive sampling. The data was subjected to statistical analysis using panel least squares (PLS) regression. The findings showed that both capital expenditure and cost efficiency had a positive, and statistical significant effect on the financial performance of the listed consumer goods companies. However, capital intensity presents a negative, and insignificant effect on financial performance. It is concluded that focusing on enhancing capital expenditure and cost efficiency will lead to successful implementation of cost leadership strategy that impound significant improvement on financial performance of the listed sampled companies. Thus, it is recommended that management should strategically realign their investments in capital-intensive technologies to achieve greater operational efficiency, which could lead to higher returns on equity. / Keywords: Capital Intensity, Cost Efficiency, Cost Leadership, Capital Expenditure, Financial Performance, Strategic Management.

Licensed Commercial Banks (LCB) and Licensed Finance Companies (LFC) are the main financial intermediaries in Sri Lanka. Lending is one of the primary income-generating activities in financial intermediaries. The credit risk arises due to the failure of borrowers to repay the loans or meet their contractual obligations. Among different types of risks facing LCB and LFC, credit risk is considered a significant determinant of financial performance. Even though numerous prior studies were conducted to examine the impact of credit risk management on the financial performance of LCB and LFC individually, there were very rare studies available that compared the impact of credit risk management practices on the financial performance of LCB and the LFC in Sri Lanka in parallel. Hence, the study aims to fill this empirical gap by investigating the impact of credit risk management on the financial performance of LCB and LFC. Further, the study investigated the level of credit risk management practices of Sri Lankan LCB sector and LFC sector by employing the CAMEL rating method. The sample comprises 15 LCBs and 34 LFCs and the examined period is from 2014 to 2019. The panel regression model to estimate the model. Data was collected through published annual reports. Descriptive analysis, Correlation, and Regression analysis were performed using EViews Statistical software. Based on the lowest CAMEL composite ranking LFC is ranked as the best sector of credit risk management. The findings of the study revealed useful insights for investors to invest their funds more accurately and earn higher profits with low risk. Based on the regression analysis, the study concludes that asset quality and capital adequacy significantly influence the performance of both LCBs and LFCs. / Keywords: Credit Risk, CAMEL analysis, License Commercial Banks (LCBs), License Finance Companies (LFCs), Financial Performance.

primary mission is to provide an extensive selection of progressive courses aimed at enhancing the English language proficiency of both undergraduate students and the broader community. / The DELT prides itself on exemplifying excellence in teaching, achieved through the implementation of innovative, authentic, and communicative pedagogical methods. These approaches foster the mastery of listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills in English as a Second Language. / A key aspect of the department's vision is to empower students, enabling them to transform into knowledgeable and creative graduates. With bolstered self-confidence, these individuals are better prepared to succeed as professionals and critical thinkers within the ever-evolving job market. As a result of the commitment to forward-thinking education, the DELT continues to make significant contributions in equipping students and the community with the linguistic tools necessary for future success. / / Historical Background / The Department of English Language Teaching (DELT) at Wayamba University has a rich history that traces its origins back to the English Language Teaching Unit (ELTU) of the North Western Province Affiliated University College (NWP AUC) and the Wayamba Campus of the Rajarata University of Sri Lanka. / During the time of NWP AUC, the ELTU made its first significant strides with the appointment of Mr. K.M. Dissanayake and Ms. R.M.S. Ramanayake as the pioneering instructors on 10.03.1995. Notably, Mr. Dissanayake's contributions extended beyond ELTU, as he was appointed to the UGC Inter-University Committee on Teaching English on 20.02.1998. / The ELTU played a vital role in conducting the GELT (Pre-University General English Language Teaching) programme for students selected from the North Western Province to attend the national universities of Sri Lanka. However, this responsibility came to an end in 2003 when the UGC abolished the GELT programme. / With the establishment of the Wayamba University of Sri Lanka on 01.10.1999, the ELTU underwent a transformation. It became a common academic support unit under the direct purview of the Vice-Chancellor, extending its services to the faculties located at Kuliyapitiya and Makandura premises and establishing two separate ELTUs at Kuliyapitiya and Makandura with two separate coordinators to man the units. / To bolster its teaching capacity, the units recruited three permanent instructors in 2001 (Mr. MKSM Samaranayake, Ms. WSA Fernando & Ms. WMC Fernando), followed by another in 2005 (Mr. EMHJ Edirisinghe). The contributions made by them are significant in developing ELTUs in different ways. Notably, four out of the six instructors earned promotions to the post of lecturer after obtaining their postgraduate qualifications in 2010. / On 21.12.2017, a significant development occurred when the English Language Teaching Unit (ELTU) underwent an upgrade and was officially established as the Department of English Language Teaching (DELT). • Extracted text (content): Lakmal, W.A.I. 1 / 12 Department of Banking and Finance, Faculty of Business Studies and Finance, Wayamba University of Sri Lanka, Kuliyapitiya, Sri Lanka / 1 lakmalwai@wyb.ac.lk / DOI : 10.57075/jaf922203 / ABSTRACT / In terms of the population that is economically active, Sri Lanka has one of the lowest proportions of women. Women entrepreneurs are individuals who put their own unique ideas into practice, coordinate and integrate numerous production factors, and run their companies while accepting the related risk. Women can increase their engagement in the labor force by being encouraged to become entrepreneurs and launch their own enterprises. Although they make up a small share of all employers today, women make up a tiny portion of those starting or running new businesses. Although there have been numerous studies conducted to examine the entrepreneurial intentions of academics, graduates, and students, little is known about the entrepreneurial intentions of women in the Sri Lankan environment. Further research is needed to address the issue of women being underutilized resources and to identify the elements that influence women's entrepreneurial intentions. As a result, the current study was conducted to identify the variables influencing women's entrepreneurial intentions in Sri Lanka in order to address the issue of the lack of female employers. The study was quantitative and cross-sectional in nature. 200 women were picked using a convenience selection method, and each received a structured questionnaire. The SPSS 23 tool was used to do a multiple regression analysis and calculate the Pearson correlation coefficient on the data set. Results revealed a significant inverse association between age, family background, and entrepreneurial inclination. The findings also showed a substantial positive association between women's ambition to start their own business and business experience, the need for more money, the want for security, the desire for status, self-efficacy, the inclination to take risks, and cultural attitudes. Women's entrepreneurial ambition was not shown to be statistically related to education, need for achievement, locus of control, inventiveness, social network, economic status, political procedures, or perceived amount of support. It can be concluded that, when women own their own businesses or work for themselves, their income levels are greater, which gives them more freedom to make their own decisions and A woman might have business goals without being a relative of an entrepreneur. / Keywords: Entrepreneurial Intention (EI), Women, Personality Traits, Contextual Factors, Motivational Factors

Women entrepreneurs are individuals who put their own unique ideas into practice, coordinate and integrate numerous production factors, and run their companies while accepting the related risk. Women can increase their engagement in the labor force by being encouraged to become entrepreneurs and launch their own enterprises. Although they make up a small share of all employers today, women make up a tiny portion of those starting or running new businesses. Although there have been numerous studies conducted to examine the entrepreneurial intentions of academics, graduates, and students, little is known about the entrepreneurial intentions of women in the Sri Lankan environment. Further research is needed to address the issue of women being underutilized resources and to identify the elements that influence women's entrepreneurial intentions. As a result, the current study was conducted to identify the variables influencing women's entrepreneurial intentions in Sri Lanka in order to address the issue of the lack of female employers. The study was quantitative and cross-sectional in nature. 200 women were picked using a convenience selection method, and each received a structured questionnaire. The SPSS 23 tool was used to do a multiple regression analysis and calculate the Pearson correlation coefficient on the data set. Results revealed a significant inverse association between age, family background, and entrepreneurial inclination. ABSTRACT

Working capital management is one of the crucial factors in shaping the financial performance of firms while ensuring their existence and growth. The study aims to investigate the determining factors of working capital requirements in the Sri Lankan context. The study was conducted using secondary data, manually collected from a sample of 37 firms listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange over a six-year period from 2013/14-2018/19. The working capital requirement has been proxied through the working capital ratio as the dependent variable of the study whereas firm-specific and macroeconomic determinants were taken as the independent variables. Profitability, Cash conversion cycle, Leverage, Tobin's Q, Firm size, and Altman Z-score have been used as firm-specific determinants and the GDP growth rate, Interest rate, and Inflation has been considered as the macroeconomic determinants of the study. Initially, summary statistics were obtained for the sample along with the diagnostic tests of normality and multicollinearity. The regression models were specified to test the hypotheses developed for the study where the analysis was performed using the Statistical Package for the Social Sciences (SPSS). The results were obtained by carrying out the Ordinary Least Square (OLS) regression method as an overall and specific analysis. Results of the overall analysis indicated that all firm-related variables except firm size have a significant relationship with the working capital requirements. Nevertheless, only the interest rate demonstrated a significant association with working capital amongst the macroeconomic factors analyzed in the study. The specific analysis provided slightly different results with both firm size and GDP growth reflecting a significant relationship with the working capital of firms. It was concluded that the profitability, cash conversion cycle, Altman z-score, leverage, and interest rate are the most influential determinants of working capital requirements amongst the factors considered under the analysis and also that the firm-specific variables are crucial over macro-economic variables in determining working capital requirements in the Sri Lankan context.

Working capital management is one of the crucial factors in shaping the financial performance of firms while ensuring their

Lankan context. The study was conducted using secondary data, manually collected from a sample of 37 firms listed on the

    - Extracted text (content): De Silva R.D / Department of Management, ATI – Dehiwala, Sri Lanka Institute of Advanced Technological Education (SLIATE) / romitadesilva4@gmail.com / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1022304 / Education plays a pivotal role in the peace and economic growth of the nation. Consequently, it is essential to provide every student with a high-quality education. A person's life is significantly impacted by the level of education. As a result, students are highly concerned about the quality of education especially when selecting a higher educational institute. The purpose of the study is to develop a measurement scale to evaluate the service quality provided by higher education. The study applied a positivism research philosophy by adopting a deductive research approach. The quantitative research method was applied, and data were collected through a questionnaire from 225 respondents who are pursuing a Higher National Diploma in Management (HNDM) and Business Administration (HNDBA) courses in SLIATE, ATI - Dehiwala. A stratified random sampling technique was adopted to select the respondents from each course. The researcher applied the SERVQUAL model using its five dimensions tangibility, reliability, responsiveness, assurance, and empathy to evaluate the level of service quality in higher education. Cronbach Alpha was used to measure the reliability and the value of 0.816 indicates that the questionnaire used to gather data on the service quality construct is highly reliable. Based on the result, composite reliability (CR) values for all constructs are above 0.70 and the AVE values are within 0.523 and 0.935 which confirmed the internal consistency in scale items. The validity of the measurements was performed through convergent and discriminant validity using the Fornell and Larcker (1981) test. The finding of the test shows that the average variance extracted (AVE) value of all the constructs is higher than 0.5 and the AVE square root in the diagonal was greater than the squared correlation with other constructs in off-diagonal which confirmed convergent and discriminant validity. Initially, 20 items were developed using five dimensions of the SERVQUAL model. After conducting the test, 20 items were reduced to 14 items, and 6 items that didn't meet the necessary criteria were removed. Finally, a new scale was developed to measure the service quality with 5 dimensions responsiveness, reliability, tangible, assurance, and empathy for higher education. / Keywords: ATI- Dehiwala, Higher education, SERVQUAL model, Service quality, SLIATE

A government's revenue depends on several sources. Among them, indirect taxes are used as a major form of collecting government revenue, especially in developing countries. We observed major findings that there is a regressive type picture of the overall indirect tax system, which mainly impacts the vulnerable groups in a country. Indirect taxes will be paid by every household irrespective of income level. Even though the incidence theory of taxation describes the burden of indirect tax distributed among producers and consumers as per the elasticity of demand and supply, that would not happen practically. The imposition of indirect taxes leads to an increase in raw materials, then increase the cost of production and ultimately increases the price level of the country, which creates cost-push inflation. The entire portion of the indirect tax will be shifted to the end consumer. The increase in indirect taxes will be led to a rise in the tax burden on households. The burden of indirect taxation highly damages the living standards of the low-income groups in a country, especially due to the consumption tax. Households that are earning low incomes will be paid a relatively higher portion of indirect taxes than the households that have higher incomes. Past researchers have emphasized the importance of eliminating the consumption taxes on essential and most sensitive commodities, which are mostly consumed by the poor income groups. / Keywords: Indirect Taxation, Tax Burden, Households, Income, Expenditure / GEL Classifications: H20, H22, H31, D14, D31

Indirect taxes will be paid by every household irrespective of income level. Even though the incidence theory of taxation

We selected the farmers on a convenience basis for the study from the Northwestern Province in Sri Lanka. We conducted a preliminary survey among farmers to understand their financial behaviors. By considering financial literacy as the independent variable, and retirement readiness and living standards as the dependent variables, we developed two ordinary least square regression models to test the hypotheses of the study. The findings of the preliminary survey revealed that most farmers maintain savings accounts, but they visit banks occasionally. Moreover, more than 50% of them are not aware of the benefits of retirement plans. However, the results confirmed that financial literacy has a strong positive impact on retirement readiness and living standards among farmers. Thereby, we concluded that improvements in farmers' financial literacy could uplift their living standards and retirement readiness. As an implication, authorities shall conduct more awareness programs for farmers on financial knowledge, behavior, and attitudes as assistance to enhance their retirement status and living standards. / Keywords: Farmers, Financial Literacy, Living Standards, Retirement Readiness.

This is an exploratory study aimed at determining how employees' skills affect client satisfaction in the automobile industry in Kurunegala district, Sri Lanka. Using a multistage sample technique, 125 clients who visited the automobile sales center were chosen as the sample of this study. After a client purchased a vehicle, the client was given a self-administrated questionnaire, which was developed on the “Much Skills” matrix that covers three categories: Job focus, soft skills, and technical skills. A well-structured questionnaire with 35 items was utilized to collect data using a quantitative research technique. The questionnaire was distributed to 125 clients. A total of 117 questionnaires were filled up, and only and 106 questionnaires were fully completed. The five-point Likert scale was used to rate the participant's view with a series of statements ranging from 1 to 5, with 1 indicating strong dissatisfaction and 5 indicating strong satisfaction. After the data has been collected, it was filtered and presented in the form of tables and graphs. The gathered data were coded and analyzed by SPSS (version 23). Along with the descriptive statistics, correlation analysis, chi-square, multiple regression, and factor analysis were used in the study's analysis. Based on the sample, the findings suggest that the technical, soft, and job-related skills of employees have an impact on clients' satisfaction. Finally, this research has provided an enhanced understanding of how organizations can improve client satisfaction. The findings of this study are essential for an organization to implement policies to achieve a higher competitive outcome, which leads to organizational success. This study contributes to the literature by increasing and improving the company's existing information in order to increase customer satisfaction with after-sales service in the Sri Lankan automotive industry.

The World Bank classification of income levels and geographical regions, including 144 countries for the 1980-2019 period, were considered. Newly introduced broad-based financial development indexes of the International Monetary Fund (IMF), i.e., financial development index, financial market index, and financial institutions index and metric tons per capita of CO2 emission extracted from World Development Indicators (WDI) used to measure the financial development and CO2 emission respectively. Panel cointegration tests were employed flowed by the panel unit root tests to reveal the long-run relationship of the variables, and Fully Modified Ordinary Least Squares (FMOLS) and Dynamic Ordinary Least Squares (DOLS) estimators were employed to investigate the long-run impact. The significant positive long-run relationship of the financial development on CO2 emission is confirmed globally. In addition, financial institutions showed higher significant long-run coefficients relative to the financial market index. The financial institutions index showed a significant impact on emissions, and it is a key cause for the positively significant impact of the aggregate financial development index. Hence, transferring to green products, services, and technologies while lowering carbon footprints is crucial in financial institutions. In addition, the adoption of digital platforms to facilitate the customers would be much worthier as it widely caused the improvement of Ecological Footprints (EFP) by lowering the actual interactions by providing a virtual interface. The information necessities of the environmentalists, economists, and regulatory agencies were facilitated through the findings to enable robust strategic decision-making processes and financial, economic, and environmental policy coherence. / Keywords: Carbon emission, IMF financial development indexes, FMOLS, DOLS

Prior research has frequently disregarded NOIM and bank size as direct predictors of profitability and liquidity, despite their importance in financial success. Through an examination of the banking environment in Sri Lanka, this study seeks to clarify how NOIM and bank size have a unique bearing on profitability (as determined by ROA) and liquidity (as determined by liquidity ratio). This research uses secondary data and a positivist quantitative analysis to reveal the distinct roles that bank size and NOIM play in affecting the financial health of Sri Lanka's commercial banks. The findings are significant because they will help shape regulatory frameworks and strategic decision-making in the industry. In order to examine the relationship between NOIM, bank size, profitability, and liquidity, this study uses a deductive research methodology and a quantitative approach based on positivism. The relationships between these variables are investigated through the use of panel data regression analysis, correlational analysis, and descriptive statistics, all of which are performed using the statistical program SPSS. The findings of this analysis show that bank size is a strong predictor of liquidity but not profitability and that NOIM has no discernible effect on either profitability or liquidity. The study shows that, although bank size and NOIM have no bearing on profitability, bank size and NOIM have a significant impact on liquidity. These revelations offer significant implications for regulatory concerns and strategic management by deepening the grasp of the variables influencing financial performance and liquidity in the banking industry. The discussion was used to compare the findings of the present study with the findings of the existing studies. The impact of NOIM has a mixture of results some scholars found that there is a significant impact while in some studies there was not a significant impact. However, as the present study also found, the band size significantly determines the profitability and liquidity of banks. / Keywords: Profitability, Liquidity, Bank Size, Non-operating income

Despite its importance, the relationship between sustainability practices and financial outcomes remains underexplored, with existing studies yielding inconclusive results. This research investigates the effect of sustainability initiatives on the financial performance of commercial banks, with a particular focus on the Sri Lankan banking sector. Specifically, it evaluates the influence of economic, environmental, and social sustainability initiatives on two key performance indicators: Return on Equity (ROE) and Return on Assets (ROA). Adopting a quantitative methodology, the study draws on secondary data extracted from the annual reports and sustainability disclosures of the six Systemically Important Banks (SIBs) in Sri Lanka for the period 2019–2023. Sustainability initiatives were measured by assessing the extent to which banks complied with sustainability guidelines outlined in the Global Reporting Initiative (GRI), classified under economic, environmental, and social dimensions. To analyze the relationship between sustainability initiatives and financial performance, the study employed descriptive statistics, correlation analysis, and multiple regression analysis. The findings reveal that economic and social sustainability initiatives have a significant impact on banks' financial performance. In contrast, environmental initiatives, despite their increasing prominence in the financial sector, show no significant relationship with financial outcomes. These results suggest that while economic and social dimensions of sustainability may directly contribute to financial performance, the benefits of environmental initiatives may be less immediate or more difficult to quantify in the short term. Overall, the study highlights the importance of integrating sustainability initiatives into banking strategies, while also emphasizing the need for further research to clarify the mechanisms through which these practices influence financial outcomes. The lack of significant findings regarding environmental initiatives, in particular, underscores the necessity for deeper investigation into contextual and institutional factors that may moderate the relationship between sustainability and performance in the Sri Lankan banking sector. / Keywords: Sustainability, Financial Performance, Economic Initiatives, Environmental Initiatives, Social Initiatives

An economy should encourage investments to achieve financial stability. Bond markets develop a platform for foreign investors to invest their funds in an alternative method of investment other than bank deposits. Maintaining an effective bond market will increase the fund flows to the economy and aggregate spending, ultimately increasing the economic growth of a particular economy. Therefore, developing a bond market is a mandatory requirement for the economic expansion of a country. There are many factors affecting bond market development. However, these factors can vary due to a particular country's economic condition. As this is an emerging area, a limited number of examines have been carried out. Further, examining the factors affecting bond market expansion in Asian growing countries and the impact of COVID-19 is important as there are no prior studies have been conducted. Therefore, this investigation is being done to look at the factors affecting bond market development in seven developing Asian countries for twelve years from 2010-2021 using panel data regression. The study used seven independent variables namely, the size of the banking system, interest rate spread, money supply, inflation, external debt, economic size, stock market capitalization, and dummy variable of COVID-19 while using the bond market development as the dependent variable. The main element influencing the bond market's growth is the banking system's size. It suggests that local credit offered by banking system changes impacts the bond market’s growth. Another important element influencing the growth of the bond market is the interest rate spread. The lending rate and deposit rates should be a concern for policymakers and decision-makers. Changes in those rates imply that it influences the expansion of the bond market. The M2 money supply suggests that changes in the money supply affect how the bond market develops. Another important consideration in the growth of the bond market is inflation. / Keywords: Bond Market Development, Asian Developing Countries, COVID-19, Economic Growth and aggregate spending, ultimately increasing the economic growth of a particular economy. Therefore, developing a bond market is a mandatory requirement for the economic expansion of a country. There are many factors affecting bond market development. However, these factors can vary due to a particular country's economic condition. As this is an emerging area, a limited number of examines have been carried out. Further, examining the factors affecting bond market expansion in Asian growing countries and the impact of COVID-19 is important as there are no prior studies have been conducted. Therefore, this investigation is being done to look at the factors affecting bond market development in seven developing Asian countries for twelve years from 2010-2021 using panel data regression. The study used seven independent variables namely, the size of the banking system, interest rate spread, money supply, inflation, external debt, economic size, stock market capitalization, and dummy variable of COVID-19 while using the bond market development as the dependent variable. The main element influencing the bond market's growth is the banking system's size. It suggests that local credit offered by banking system changes impacts the bond market’s growth. Another important element influencing the growth of the bond market is the interest rate spread. The lending rate and deposit rates should be a concern for policymakers and decision-makers. Changes in those rates imply that it influences the expansion of the bond market. The M2 money supply suggests that changes in the money supply affect how the bond market develops. Another important consideration in the growth of the bond market is inflation.Keywords: Bond Market Development, Asian Developing Countries,

Even so, Sri Lankan consumers still feel insecure to use online shopping activities through internet devices, with the uncontrollable spread of COVID – 19, Sri Lankan consumers also have transposed their traditional buying behaviour and they have moved towards online shopping activities notably. Because online shopping can be considered as an important tool to maintain social distance, stay at home during pandemic situation and to protect from viruses. Therefore, the objective of carrying out thisresearch study is to identifying the factors affecting to move consumer behaviour towards online shopping during the COVID – 19 pandemic with special reference to Gampaha District. This study has used five independent factors such as health factor, security factor, price factor, convenience factor and product factor. This study used primary data gathered from 140 consumers who are using online shopping during COVID –19 pandemic, representing two divisional secretary divisions as Gampaha and Negombo. The convenience sampling method was used to choose consumers who purchase online, and the purposive sampling method was utilized to collect data from respondents with more knowledge and experience with online purchasing during the COVID – 19 epidemic. The researcher used four (04) months to complete this research work successfully. Reliability analysis, frequency analysis, descriptive statistics, correlation analysis, and regression analysis used to analyze data obtained through an online questionnaire. The main analysis method was regression analysis and as per the results of regression analysis, all independent factors such as health factor, security factor, price factor, convenience factor and product factor have a statistically significant impact on movements of consumer behaviour towards online shopping through the pandemic situation. Therefore, the researcher can recommend that consumers have moved towards online shopping after considering health factors, security factors, price factors, convenience factors and product factors.

Therefore, energy efficiency strategies and the growing demand for renewable energy sources are significant to minimize the negative impacts of climate change across the globe. This study examines the current electricity consumption of the Faculty of Social Sciences and Humanities (FSSH) of the Rajarata University of Sri Lanka. It explores the potential of using solar power as a renewable energy source to meet the faculty's electricity demand. As the university is located in a dry zone, using solar power as a renewable energy source has enormous potential. This research was based on both primary and secondary data. Primary data were collected / from academic and non-academic staff through key person interviews and students through a survey based on a structured questionnaire. Secondary data were collected from electricity bills of the FSSH and available electrical equipment data. Cost Benefit Analysis (CBA) is mainly employed to examine the financial and economic viability of transforming to solar power to meet the energy requirements of the faculty. This study disclosed that the electricity consumption of the university in general and the FSSH had increased drastically during 2015 - 2018. The study found that electricity consumption creates an external cost of 31856.53 LKR as CO2 emission per year. Results of the financial CBA estimates indicate that installing a / solar power system to the FSSH will generate 27,340,401.08 LKR of Net Present Value (NPV) and 1.86 of Cost-Benefit Ratio (CBR), and the Internal Rate of Return (IRR) is 21.63%. After considering the externalities, the results of the economic CBA generate little higher estimates than the financial CBA with 27,677,889.62 / LKR of Net Present Value, 1.87 of CBR and 21.81 of IRR. Therefore, it can be concluded that investing in solar energy systems for the FSSH is a financially and economically viable and environmentally sound business. / Keywords: Climate Change, Electricity Consumption, Energy Efficiency, Solar Power, Cost-Benefit Analysis

M. / Central Bank of Sri Lanka, Colombo 01, Sri Lanka / manel@cbsl.lk / ORCID: https://orcid.org/0000-0003-1347-6529 / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1112403 / Financial Inclusion (FI) is a key pillar of financial development and inclusive growth in a country. It plays an immense role and is showing an evolving nature around the world. Most research now investigates this concept mainly due to its supportive nature for a country's development perspectives. Many countries make investments and pay considerable attention to initiating FI agendas and national FI strategies to improve the level of FI in their countries. Economic empowerment through formal financial sector activities, poverty reduction, lowering income inequality, enhancing savings and investments, and improving productivity are some of the contributory factors of FI. Reviewing nearly 50 past literature, this article attempts to develop new literature regarding the importance of FI for a country. Furthermore, the study examines FI definitions and barriers to FI. The findings of the literature reveal that FI directly supports the achievement of a country's growth objectives. The main contributory factors of FI are employment creation, reducing income inequality and poverty, smoothing the financial sector while maintaining financial system stability, and working with technological developments towards financial activities. However, there are several important bottlenecks such as lack of income, difficult access points due to long distance, barriers to digital finance and payments, and lack of financial knowledge. Affordable financial sector products and services for everyone tend to improve the level of FI. The outcome of the research provides valuable insight for policymakers and responsible authorities to take proactive actions to reach the FI targets by eliminating barriers to FI. In this regard, higher participation of the population towards the formal financial sector in a country is an important element, and actions should be arranged for the gradual transformation of people to achieve this target. The findings of this study further provide avenues for future studies and policy-level decisions, highlighting the fact that FI is an important concept for creating a financially inclusive country. / Keywords-: Barriers to Financial Inclusion, Digital Finance, Economic Growth, Financial Inclusion, Formal Financial Sector

People are exposed to a number of hazards as a result of the increasing use of these services, including data theft, confidentiality issues, uncontrolled network operators, security threats, and a lack of expertise in digital and financial abilities. Therefore, this study aims to address this issue by investigating the impact of financial inclusion on Digital Financial Literacy (DFL) in Small and medium-sized Enterprises (SMEs) in Sri Lanka. SMEs were in Western Province, Central Province, Northwestern Province, and North Central Province, as there are a significant number of SMEs that were established. The study employed a quantitative approach, drawing a sample of 372 SMEs under purposive sampling methods. A structured questionnaire was used to gather data, and four hypotheses were developed for the investigation. Digital financial literacy was the dependent variable, and financial inclusion was the independent variable in the research model. Regression analysis, correlation analysis, and descriptive statistics were the analytical tools used in the data analysis, which was conducted using the Statistical Package for Social Sciences (SPSS) version 25.0. The regression results revealed that access to and usage of financial services, financial innovation, and service quality in SMEs significantly impact digital financial literacy. The findings revealed significant relationships between financial inclusion and digital financial literacy, highlighting the importance of enhancing financial literacy to improve access and usage of digital financial services among small and medium-sized enterprises. The results offer valuable insights for policymakers, financial institutions, and stakeholders to develop targeted interventions, policies, and programs that promote financial inclusion and empower small and medium-sized enterprises. By improving digital financial literacy, small and medium-sized enterprises can better manage their finances, make informed decisions, and contribute to economic growth and poverty reduction in the region. / Keywords: Financial Inclusion, Digital Financial Literacy, Small and Medium-sized Enterprises

The small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) are small in nature therefore, it faces challenges to adopt proper financial management practices to enhance the profitability. This study investigates how financial management practices influence the financial performance of SMEs in Uva Province, Sri Lanka. The study explores critical dimensions of financial management such as working capital management, financial reporting and analysis, accounting information systems, investment appraisal, and financing. A sample of 500 SMEs was selected and data were gathered using a self-administered questionnaire. Descriptive statistics, Pearson correlation, and multiple regression analysis were utilized to examine the data, with Cronbach's Alpha confirming the reliability of the measurement instruments. The results reveal significant positive correlations between effective financial management practices and the financial performance of SMEs. Specifically, improvements in Working Capital Management, Financial Reporting, Accounting Information Systems, Investment Appraisal, and Financing are linked to better financial outcomes. The regression analysis indicates that these practices collectively exert a substantial influence on financial performance, with the model exhibiting a strong predictive fit. These findings highlight the vital role of effective financial management in improving SME performance and success. / Keywords: Financial management practices, Performance, SMEs, Sri Lanka

For the study, a longitudinal research approach was chosen. The study's specified model was estimated using the Error Correction Mechanism (ECM) and multivariate ordinary least square (OLS) techniques. Findings revealed that only the capital gains tax rate hindered trading activities in the Nigerian stock market in the long run during the period studied. However, in the short run, transaction costs, capital gain tax rates, and dividend tax rates all have a negative impact on trading activity on the Nigerian stock exchange, but they fail the significant test. As a result, the study concludes that the capital gains tax rate is the only financial market friction that impedes trade on the Nigerian stock exchange during the study period. To mitigate the negative impact on trading activity on the Nigerian bourse, the government should ensure that capital gains are taxed at a reasonable rate. Accordingly, the present capital gains tax rate of 10% should be cut to 5%. / Keywords: Financial Market Frictions, Nigerian Stock Market, Volume of Stock Traded, Transaction Cost, Capital gain Tax Rate / JEL Classification: F21; G15

Stock market indices are vital fragments of information for investors. It is very important to develop models that reflect the pattern of the stock price movements for different sectors since it becomes very significant to investors and policymakers. Therefore, the aim of this research study was to develop models to forecast different sector indices in Colombo Stock Exchange and to compare sector-wise models. The investigation was performed using secondary data for a sample of ten listed sectors in the Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE) for the thirty-four years from 2 nd January 1985 to 31 st March 2019. Secondary data were collected by using the data library maintained by Colombo Stock Exchange. Financial time series data analysis techniques were used to analyze the collected data. It was applied the ARCH family models in this research study, which included the Autoregressive conditional heteroscedasticity model (ARCH), Generalized Autoregressive conditional heteroscedasticity model (GARCH), Threshold Autoregressive conditional heteroscedasticity model (TARCH), Exponential generalized autoregressive conditional heteroscedastic model (EGARCH), Integrated Generalized Autoregressive conditional heteroscedasticity model (IGARCH) and Power Autoregressive conditional heteroscedasticity model (PARCH) since the sector indices are financial time series data. Findings revealed that the appropriate model to forecast the sector indices of Oil Palms sector, Services sector and Stores & Supplies sector as PARCH (2,1) model, Beverage, Food & Tobacco sector as PARCH (1,1) model, Chemicals & Pharmaceuticals sector as PARCH (2,2) model, Banking Finance & Insurance sector and Investment Trusts sector as IGARCH (2,2) model, Footwear & Textiles sector as EGARCH (1,1) model, the Manufacturing sector as EGARCH (1,3) model and Hotels & Travels sector as TARCH (1,1) model. Economic resilience is a crucial aspect of sustainable economic development, enabling organizations to withstand and recover from adverse events or disruptions. Corporate governance, on the other hand, represents the mechanisms and processes through which companies are directed and controlled, influencing their performance and stability. Using data from ten manufacturing companies (n=10) listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE) this research analyzes the relationship between corporate governance practices and economic resilience in the context of the manufacturing sector in Sri Lanka. The study utilizes quantitative measures, such as board size, board independence, board gender diversity, the existence of an audit committee, the existence of a nomination committee, board meetings, and CEO duality to measure CGPs, and manufacturing sector performance as a mediating variable. Economic resilience was used as the considered as the outcome variable. Relevant data were extracted from the annual reports of the chosen companies for the period from 2015 to 2019. Finally, 50 observations were used for the data analysis. The Pearson correlation test was executed to determine the relationship between CGPs, manufacturing sector performance, and economic resilience. Multiple regression analysis was performed to determine the explanatory power of the combination of these three segments. The findings highlight that manufacturing sector performance has a negative correlation with fiscal deficit to GDP which means that manufacturing sector performance increases and the budget deficit goes down which impacts on economic resilience of the country. The regression results suggest that board gender diversity has a significant relationship with manufacturing sector performance and the performance of the manufacturing sector. Moreover, the performance of listed manufacturing companies has a mediating effect on the economic resilience of the country and CGPs. The insights from this study provide valuable guidance for policymakers, regulators, and manufacturing sector companies in Sri Lanka, enabling them to prioritize and implement corporate governance reforms that enhance economic resilience. / Keywords: Corporate Governance Practices, Economic Resilience, Fiscal Deficit to GDP Ratio, Theory of Unbalanced Growth

• Extracted text (content): Nijam, H.M. 1 and Priyadarshani A.J. 2 / 12 Department of Accounting and Finance, Faculty of Management and Commerce, South Eastern University of Sri Lanka, Oluvil. / 1 nijamhm@seu.ac.lk , 2 jayamali1994731@gmail.com / DOI : 10.57075/jaf922sp07 / ABSTRACT / The purpose of this study is to investigate the impact of International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS) adoption on key accounting ratios of firms listed in the Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE). The study also sought to test if the entity's sector discriminates the impact that the IFRS adoption has on accounting ratios being evaluated. Descriptive statistics and non-parametric univariate analysis (Mann Whitney U test) were used to compare pre and post IFRS convergence ratios. The researchers tested eleven accounting ratios falling under profitability, liquidity, leverage, and market performance. We randomly sampled 40 firms listed in CSE, 20 each from the service and manufacturing sectors. The study period was ten years from 2007 through 2016, whereby the periods corresponding to pre-IFRS convergence were from 2007 through 2011, and post-IFRS convergence was captured from 2012 through 2016.. We showed that all profitability measures we tested were significantly impacted by IFRS adoption. We infer that the direct comparability of the profitability measures across pre and post-IFRS periods is no longer useful for decision making. In contrast, all liquidity ratios investigated were significantly indifferent between the pre and post-IFRS adoption. We have argued that liquidity measures have not changed considerably due to IFRS adoption and may thus still be comparable across pre and post-IFRS periods. Leverage and market ratios returned mixed results. We also document that the IFRS convergence's impact on profitability and leverage ratios tends to be influenced by the sector in which firms operate, while its impact is not evidenced in relation to liquidity measures and market ratios. The limitation of this paper is that the effects of firm-specific variables and macro-economic factors on accounting ratios were not controlled. The results are useful for those interested in analyzing the long-term trends of accounting ratios. Our findings will also help the policymakers, standards setters, financial analysts, and future researchers about the behaviors of accounting ratios and quality financial reporting due to convergence to IFRS-based accounting regimes. This study is one of very few works on this topic in Sri Lanka, an IFRS jurisdiction with a developing economy. / Keywords : Accounting Standards, International Accounting, IFRS Adoption, Accounting Ratios, Financial Ratios.

However, there is a scarcity of research which examins the impact of accounting information on stock price in the Sri Lankan context. This research endeavours to evaluate the value relevance of accounting information which tells the impact of accounting information on stock price, with a particular emphasis on net asset value and earnings. The study also accounts for firm size and financial leverage by examining listed consumer service companies and food, beverage, and tobacco companies in Sri Lanka from 2017 to 2022. The sample encompasses all firms in these industries, although those with unavailable data are excluded. Regression analysis and descriptive statistics were implemented to ascertain the relationships among the chosen variables. Accounting information, including net asset value and firm size, has a substantial positive impact on stock prices, as reported by the findings. Contrary to this, earnings demonstrate an insignificant influence. While the industry factor also has a substantial impact, financial leverage has a substantial negative impact on stock prices. These results offer significant insights for policymakers, investors, and managers, allowing them to enhance accounting information's accuracy, reliability, and relevance and decision-making processes. / Keywords: Accounting information, Earnings per share, Net assets value per share, Value relevance, Stock price

It delves into the impact of variables such as Board Size (BSIZE), Board Activity (BACT), Board Independence Composition (BIND), Audit Committee Size (AUDS), and Frequency of Audit Committee Meeting (AUDM) on Intellectual Capital, treating the latter as the dependent variable. For the five years between 2018 and 2022, the research technique comprises a thorough investigation of banking sector company in Sri Lanka, excluding three banks. The goal of the study is to obtain understanding of the connection between CG variables and IC efficiency through secondary data analysis using data from stock market transactions and audited financial statements. / The main analytical tools are descriptive statistics and regression modeling, which enable a detailed comprehension of the relationship between CG dynamics and IC efficiency. Through a detailed examination of these variables across time and across different financial institutions, the study seeks to illuminate the ways in which CG practices impact the creation and application of IC in the banking industry. In the conclusion, the results of this study are important not only for scholars but also for professionals and decision-makers in the banking sector in Sri Lanka. The study provides significant insights that can guide strategic decision-making, governance reforms, and resource allocation within banking institutions, ultimately leading to improved organizational efficiency and long-term sustainability. This is achieved by revealing the complex relationships between Corporate Governance and Intellectual Capital. / Keywords-: Corporate Governance, Intellectual Capital, Value Added Intellectual Coefficient (VAIC)

In the empirical investigation, return on assets and return on equity are used to measure financial performance while non-performing loans and capital adequacy are proxies for credit risk. Cost efficiency, average lending, loan-to-deposit ratio, and bank size are considered bank-specific factors. Seventeen licensed commercial banks and five licensed specialized banks are taken as samples of this study, and data is collected from annual reports of licensed banks in Sri Lanka during the period from 2015 to 2021. Panel data regression analysis is employed to examine the hypotheses. Results of the study revealed that non-performing loans have a negative impact on banks' financial performance in terms of return on assets of licensed banks whereas average lending has a positive impact on banks' financial performance in terms of return on assets. Other variables such as capital adequacy, cost efficiency, loan-to-deposit ratio, and bank size have not shown any significant impact on the financial performance of licensed banks. The output of the study may be useful to the bank lending unit's decision-makers, investors, and economic policymakers of the country. The Banks should seek mechanisms to improve their risk management capacity efficiency and quality lending to remain competitive in the market. / Keywords: Bank-specific factors, credit risk, financial performance, non-performing loan.

However, the Covid19 pandemic adversely hampered the performance of the textile sector and seriously affected the company's economic operations . To continue in business Whatever the state of affairs are in the nation and the world, capitalizing is a must. There are primarily two forms of funding the business for that. Those are debt and equity financing. Accordingly,the study's primary objective is to investigate the effects of capital structure on business performance during the Covid-19 pandemic of small and medium scale enterprises in Sri Lanka’s apparel and textile industry. The study was a quantitative research study, employed a survey research strategy. A structured questionnaire was administered to collect primary data from responses and data was analyzed through statistical software SPSS 23.0. Sample size consists of 154 SMEs in apparel and textile industry in western province in Sri Lanka and sampling technique was stratified sampling technique. Employing Pearson's correlation analysis and multiple linear regression analysis, the conceptual framework was evaluated. The empirical findings from the use of multiple linear regression analysis showed that debt financing had a significant and positive influence on business performance whereas equity financing had a significant and negative influence on firm performance. The goodness of fitness of the overall model presented 55%. Out of nine hypotheses, three hypotheses were rejected through regression analysis. Borrowings, Other payables, Owner’s intangible assets were not significantly influenced on firm performance.Trade payables, contractual obligations, owners' cash on hand, and owners' physical assets all had a substantial impact on the operating activities of the garment and textile business during the Covid-19 outbreak.Based on the findings of the study, it was concluded that, SMEs in the apparel and textile industry employed both short-term debt and equity (retained earnings) to finance the operating activities of the firm during the Covid-19 pandemic and debt financing and equity financing significantly impacted on firm performance of the company. / Keywords: Debt, Equity, Covid-19, Apparel industry, Performance

Accordingly, the conceptual framework was developed with the theoretical support of the Contingency theory. The researcher-administrated questionnaires were distributed under a one-time survey strategy and 381 respondents were used for analysis. According to the nature of the study, the widely used Structural Equation Modelling technique (SEM) was used to analyze the data, and SmartPLS Version 3 was used as the tool found that all three project methodologies are impacting significantly on Project Management Success with Standard Project Management Methodology (SPMM) being the strongest followed by Customized Project Management Methodology (CPMM) and Inhouse Developed Project Management Methodologies (IPMM). The findings of this study show that 39% of the variation in project management success is explained by the project management methodologies. / Keywords: Project Management Methodologies, Project Management Success, Standard Project Management Methodologies, Customized Project Management Methodologies, Inhouse Developed Project Management Methodologies

Considering the firm's financial performance is the best way to analyze its performance. The relationship between firm financial performance and sustainability reporting of the manufacturing sector has not consistently been identified by Sri Lankan researchers. Then, there is a need to further investigate this area to be carried out to recognize the factual impact of SR. This study fills the gap of previous studies and will contribute to the existing literature by identifying the significant relationship between firm financial performance and SR. Considering the lack of usage of the GRI guidelines and the quality of sustainability reporting of Listed manufacturing companies in Sri Lanka, the study will develop a sustainability scoring model to measure SR. Return on equity (ROE) and Return on Assets (ROA) will be used to measure the financial performance of the organization. All the listed manufacturing companies which disclose sustainability reporting are considered as the sample of the study. Since Sri Lanka faced Covid-19 during the year 2020 onwards, the analysis will be divided into 2 phases the “pre-Covid-19 period” from 2015 to 2019 and the “post-Covid-19 Period” from 2020. The researchers focus on secondary data collection techniques to gather data and required data will have collected through annual reports and sustainability reports. The study will use some statistical methods to analyze quantitative data which is collected from manufacturing companies listed in CSE. Data will be analyzed using descriptive statistics, Pearson correlation, and panel data regression analysis. Mean, standard deviation, and tables will be used to discuss the findings, according to the descriptive analysis. Regression analysis was used to test the relationship between environmental, economic, and social disclosures and firm financial performance. The findings of this research help to take decisions of the stakeholders of manufacturing companies in Sri Lanka. Finally, such information will help investors, decision-makers, regulators, policymakers, and scholars to improve their knowledge about sustainable reporting practices. / Keywords: Covid-19, Global Reporting Initiative, Return on Equity, Return on Assets, Sustainability Reporting" requirement in many countries as well as Sri Lanka, many companies use them. Considering the firm's financial performance is the best way to analyze its performance. The relationship between firm financial performance and sustainability reporting of the manufacturing sector has not consistently been identified by Sri Lankan researchers. Then, there is a need to further investigate this area to be carried out to recognize the factual impact of SR. This study fills the gap of previous studies and will contribute to the existing literature by identifying the significant relationship between firm financial performance and SR. Considering the lack of usage of the GRI guidelines and the quality of sustainability

    - Extracted text (content): INTELLECTUAL CAPITAL AND FIRM PERFORMANCE: THE MODERATING ROLE OF CSR IN SRI LANKA'S MATERIALS SECTOR / Thujinthan, R1 and Tharshiga, P2 / 1,2Department of Financial Management, University of Jaffna / ABSTRACT / This study examines the moderating effect of Corporate Social Responsibility on the relationship between Intellectual Capital and firm performance, focusing on companies listed on the Colombo Stock Exchange in Sri Lanka from 2016 to 2022. Using a sample of 18 firms in the material sector, data were analysed through descriptive statistics, correlation analysis, variance inflation factor analysis, and panel data analysis in E-Views. The findings indicate that Human Capital Efficiency and CSR significantly impact Return on Assets(ROA). In contrast, structural capital efficiency and capital employed efficiency did not exhibit substantial effects on return on equity (ROE). The Hausman test results suggest that a random effects model is appropriate for ROA, while a fixed effects model is suitable for ROE. Based on these findings, businesses should prioritise investments in human capital through employee training, development, and innovation to enhance financial performance. Additionally, firms should align CSR initiatives with their strategic goals to maximise benefits. Policymakers can use these insights to establish industry-specific regulations encouraging sustainable business practices and resource efficiency. Furthermore, investors and stakeholders can leverage this knowledge to assess financial sustainability and CSR effectiveness, leading to informed investment decisions that align with long-term value creation. This study contributes to intellectual capital, CSR, and financial performance literature, offering practical implications for corporate leaders, policymakers, and investors. / Keywords: Intellectual Capital, Corporate Social Responsibility, Firm Performance, Human Capital Efficiency and Structural Capital

Consequenttly, that has been lead to conduct a study to examine the impact between forensic accounting knowledge on fraud detection.The researcher has adoped the dedcuctive approach for this study and the primary data has been collected from 165 accounting practitioners in Sri lanka. Fraud detection has been considered as the dependent variable while accounting skills, legal background, knowledge of procedures, and forensic accounting knowledge have been considered the independent variables. For the analysis purpose, descriptive statistics, factor analysis and inferential statistics such as multiple linear regression have been adopted. The findings of the study revealed that there is a significant impact in between the accounting skills, knowledge of procedures and knowledge of forensic accounting on fraud detection while there is no any significant impact between the legal background and the fraud detection.

Concept of Value Co creation is more practical in today's context as consumers are pursuing Trade off value which results to depict switching behavior in the Fast-Food restaurant industry. Thus, the impact of Value Co creation on Brand Love is a claimed empirical gap within different market contexts. The influence of Value Co creation on Brand love and evaluations has been studied in many contexts whilst research gaps are emphasized. Research depicts the factors impact on Value co creation which comprises with two dimensions: Customer participation behaviour and Customer citizenship behaviour, with each dimension having four components. With reference to the empirical gaps found within the Fast-food restaurant context in Sri Lanka, this study was carried out as a deductive study and a quantitative method was employed. The sample was limited to 384 respondents, and it used the convenience sampling method. Alongside, questionnaires were distributed among the generation Z consumers within Western province of Sri Lanka. The data analysis was assisted by using Statistical Package for Social Science (SPSS) version 23. The findings revealed that the two main dimensions of Value co creation, Customer participation behaviour and Customer citizenship behaviour depicts a significant positive impact towards the dependent variable Brand love. Thus, as a conclusion main independent variable Value Co creation depicts positive significant impacts on Brand love. Study presented theoretical implications to emphasize the theoretical contribution done to the study area and managerial implications by highlighting the applications of Value Co creation methods to generate brand love whilst measures to be taken were also presented.

• Extracted text (content): OPPORTUNITIES AND CHALLENGES OF THE GIG ECONOMY IN SRI LANKA / Amarasooriya T.S.D.T1 / 1Department of Management Studies, Faculty of Indigenous Social Sciences and Management Studies, Gampaha Wickramarachchi University of Indigenous Medicine, No.55, Thalapathpitiya Road, Embuldeniya, Nugegoda, Sri Lanka. / 1shalikathilakarathne.3@gmail.com / ORCID: 0009-0007-7998-2025 / ABSTRACT / Global statistics show that the gig economy offers the second-highest number of employment opportunities. In Sri Lanka, this concept is relatively new, with recent estimates indicating that less than 5% of the workforce engages in gig work. The gig economy can provide many opportunities not only for gig workers but also for the whole society. Studying this phenomenon in the Sri Lankan context is timely, as it has the potential to reshape employment structures, contribute to foreign exchange earnings, and create alternative livelihood options, particularly in the face of economic challenges and unemployment. On the other hand, gig workers have to face many challenges. The main objective of this study is to investigate the opportunities and challenges of the gig economy in Sri Lanka. Since this is a qualitative study, the researcher used inductivism. A purposive sample of eight gig workers was selected, which is justified as appropriate for an exploratory study. A qualitative survey was conducted by interviewing each interviewee in-depth. The researcher has found that gig workers in Sri Lanka gain different benefits, such as great flexibility and freedom, the ability to earn a higher amount of money than they would in traditional jobs, earnings are from foreign currencies, and educated people can also earn a higher income based on skills, and gig working is an alternative to traditional jobs. Although the gig economy provides different types of opportunities, it also comprises many challenges. In this study, the researcher has mainly focused on challenges rather than opportunities. The researcher identified common challenges in the gig economy, such as a lack of real human interaction, huge income fluctuations, and work-life imbalance. The researcher has identified that there are a few special challenges of the gig economy in Sri Lanka, such as technological difficulties, new tax policies, a lack of proper foreign currency withdrawal methods, and less appreciation by society. / Keywords: Challenges, Gig economy, Gig workers, Opportunities, Sri Lanka

Furthermore, dividend decision is a major device to alleviate agency problems between management and shareholders and between large shareholders and minority shareholders. The current study aims to understand the ownership structure of non-financial companies in Sri Lanka and to investigate its impact on dividend payment to realize whether to what extent the results contribute to mitigating agency problems. The independent variables comprise institutional ownership, managerial ownership, foreign ownership and ownership concentration representing ownership structure characteristics. Dividend payment is the dependent variable proxied by dividend per share. The study also selects firm size, profitability, and previous year's dividend payment as control variables. The study was carried out on an annual data of 72 non- financial companies for a period from 2015 to 2019. The descriptive statistics of ownership characteristics reveal the majority of institutional shareholders are Sri Lankan citizens and they are major and concentrated ownership while individual shareholders have minor ownership in non-financial companies in Sri Lanka. Management body has very little holding of equity shares. Results of fixed panel regression analysis show that ownership structure does not have a significant impact on dividend payment, but profitability and previous year's dividend payment evidence a positive relation. Dividend payment does not seem to be subjective to firm size. The results of the study are supported to mitigate the agency problems between managers and shareholders and between large shareholders and minority shareholders. The results are useful to policy makers, regulators and other corporate interested parties. / Keywords: Ownership Structure, Dividend Payment, Non- Financial Companies, Agency Problems

They lead to a paradigm shift in the way people connect and communicate with each other, how to express and share ideas, and even how to interact with products, brands, and organizations. In addition, social networks have become an important consumer knowledge network. Social media, especially Facebook and Twitter, are important platforms for building relationships with consumers and for consumers to obtain information about brands and their products. E - WOW has grown at an extraordinary rate over the past couple of decades, creating multiple opportunities for marketing in online settings. The explosion of social media helps customers become more empowered and engaged in their brand interactions while also providing them with new tools in their search, evaluation, choice, and purchase of marketing offerings. Consumers trust the information published by the brand and the information published by other consumers online. The future of social media is also seen as a marketing tool. Consequently, these developments are influencing marketing practices, both strategically, and tactically. This setup has been able to communicate the best experience possessed of a brand to consumers so that they are able to recall the brand in a long time which led to the formation of trust, satisfaction, and loyalty towards the brand. This research aims to analyze the effect of social media marketing activities on E-brand Trust. The paper followed a deductive approach and attempted to review current scholarly social media marketing literature and research, including its beginnings, current usage, benefits and downsides, and best practices. Further examinations to uncover the vital job of social media, inside a digitalized business period. As a result of the comprehensive analysis, it undoubtedly displays that social media is a significant power in the present marketing scene, especially on E Brand Trust.

They lead to a paradigm shift in the way people connect and communicate with each other, how to express and share ideas, and even how to interact with products, brands, and organizations. In addition, social networks have become an important consumer knowledge network. Social media, especially Facebook and Twitter, are important platforms for building relationships with consumers and for consumers to obtain information about brands and their products. E - WOW has grown at an extraordinary rate over the past couple of decades, creating multiple opportunities for marketing in online settings. The explosion of social media helps customers become more empowered and engaged in their brand interactions while also providing them with new tools in their search, evaluation, choice, and purchase of marketing offerings. Consumers trust the information published by the brand and the information published by other consumers online. The future of social media is also seen as a marketing tool. Consequently, these developments are influencing marketing practices, both strategically, and tactically. This setup has been able to communicate the best experience possessed of a brand to consumers so that they are able to recall the brand in a long time which led to the formation of trust, satisfaction, and loyalty towards the brand. This research aims to analyze the effect of social media marketing activities on E-brand Trust. The paper followed a deductive approach and attempted to review current scholarly social media marketing literature and research, including its beginnings, current usage, benefits and downsides, and best practices. Further examinations to uncover the vital job of social media, inside a digitalized business period. As a result of the comprehensive analysis, it undoubtedly displays that social media is a significant power in the present marketing scene, especially on E Brand Trust.

• tabs.4.title: Manuscript Preparation

• Extracted text (tabs.4.content): Sri Lankan Journal of Business Studies and Finance (SLJBSF) will publish papers written only in English. Authors are advised to make sure that their manuscripts are in standard written English. All manuscripts should be compiled in the following order: title page; abstract; keywords; main text; acknowledgments; references; appendices / Manuscript style and format / Times New Roman 11-point font and A4 page setting should be used. Page numbers should be centered on the bottom margin. All margins should be one inch. Manuscripts should be double spaced. / Manuscript preparation Title Page / The title page (first page) of the manuscript should include the title, the name(s) and affiliation(s) of the author(s) and their postal address(es), phone number(s), and e-mail address(es). It's better if the author(s) can include the ORCID number (register by visiting https://orcid.org/) of the corresponding author. The title should be in bold type, upper case, single-spaced, and centered across the top of the first page, in 14-point Times New Roman font. Other details should be single-spaced and centered below the title. In the case of more than one author, the corresponding author should be indicated with an asterisk mark. Please note that the author name(s) must not appear anywhere else in the manuscript except on the title page and the reference list (if cited). / Abstract / The second page should begin with the title of the paper followed by a one-paragraph abstract of not more than 250 words and 3-5 key words. The abstract should include, in brief, the objectives of the research (i.e. knowledge gap being addressed), methods adopted, major findings, and conclusions. It's better if the authors can include the Journal of Economic Literature (JEL) classification number(s) below the key-words. / Text / The text of the papers should begin on page 3. All body paragraphs should begin with a paragraph indent and be fully justified. Wherever possible, authors should arrange the manuscripts in well-defined sections as appropriate for their work, such as introduction/ background of the study, review of literature, context and methods of the study (when applicable), results and interpretations, and discussion and conclusion. / References and Appendices, on separate pages, should be arranged at the end of the manuscript. Page numbers should continue through all pages of the manuscript, including References and Appendices. / Manuscripts should be up to a maximum of 8000 words in length. This includes all text, for example, the structured abstract, references, all text in tables, and figures and appendices. / Headings / SLJBSF allows authors to use three levels of headings. First-level headings should be flushed left, in bold type 12-point Times New Roman font; the first letter of main words should be in upper case. Second-level headings should be flushed left in bold, italics 11-point Time New Roman font; the first letter of main words should be in upper case. Third-level headings are paragraph headings, which should be indented and in italicized 11-point Times New Roman font; the first letter of the heading should be in upper case. / Tables / Tables should be numbered consecutively using Arabic numbering (Table 1, Table 2, etc.) and must have corresponding references in the main text. Tables should also have appropriate and concise headings. Tables should contain only horizontal lines and each should be placed immediately after the paragraph in the text containing the first reference to it. Sri Lankan Journal of Business Studies and Finance (SLJBSF) will publish papers written only in English. Authors are advised to make sure that their manuscripts are in standard written English. All manuscripts should be compiled in the following order: title page; abstract; keywords; main text; acknowledgments; references; appendicesManuscript style and formatTimes New Roman 11-point font and A4 page setting should be used. Page numbers should be centered on the bottom margin. All margins should be one inch. Manuscripts should be double spaced.Manuscript preparation Title PageThe title page (first page) of the manuscript should include the title, the name(s) and affiliation(s) of the author(s) and their postal address(es), phone number(s), and e-mail address(es). It's better if the author(s) can include the ORCID number (register by visiting https://orcid.org/) of the corresponding author. The title should be in bold type, upper case, single-spaced, and centered across the top of the first page, in 14-point Times New Roman font. Other details should be single-spaced and centered below the title. In the case of more than one author, the corresponding author should be indicated with an asterisk mark. Please note that the author name(s) must not appear anywhere else in the manuscript except on the title page and the reference list (if cited).AbstractThe second page should begin with the title of the paper followed by a one-paragraph abstract of not more than 250 words and 3-5 key words. The abstract should include, in brief, the objectives of the research (i.e. knowledge gap being addressed), methods adopted, major findings, and conclusions. It's better if the authors can include the Journal of Economic Literature (JEL) classification number(s) below the key-words.TextThe text of the papers should begin on page 3. All body paragraphs should begin with a paragraph indent and be fully justified. Wherever possible, authors should arrange the manuscripts in well-defined sections as appropriate for their work, such as introduction/background of the study, review of literature, context and methods of the study (when applicable), results and interpretations, and discussion and conclusion.References and Appendices, on separate pages, should be arranged at the end of the manuscript. Page numbers should continue through all pages of the manuscript, including References and Appendices.Manuscripts should be up to a maximum of 8000 words in length. This includes all text, for example, the structured abstract, references, all text in tables, and figures and appendices.HeadingsSLJBSF allows authors to use three levels of headings. First-level headings should be flushed left, in bold type 12-point Times New Roman font; the first letter of main words should be in upper case. Second-level headings should be flushed left in bold, italics 11-point Time New Roman font; the first letter of main words should be in upper case. Figures should also have appropriate and concise headings. Graphs should be presented as camera-ready, using black ink only. Each figure should be placed immediately after the paragraph in the text containing the first reference to it. Any figures not based on the authors’ original data should have source notes with corresponding references appearing in the reference list.Conflict of InterestAll submissions should include a statement declaring any personal relationships that could cause a potential conflict of interest. Any funding sources should be properly acknowledged and should include a statement whether such funding could lead to a potential conflict of interest. This statement should be presented at the end of the main text prior to the list of references. Where there is no conflict ofinterest, this should be stated.AcknowledgmentIf authors wish to acknowledge financial support or any other assistance, a note can be added below the statement on conflict of interest prior to references.ReferencesSLJBSF uses American Psychological Association (APA) style guide (Edition 6) for both in-text citations and reference lists. I available include the Digital Object Identification (DOI) number also in the reference. The reference list should be presented at the end of the manuscript and the entries should be double spaced.AppendicesAny appendices should present after the list of references. They should be numbered consecutively in Arabic numerals (e.g. Appendix 1, Appendix 2, etc.). All appendices should be referred to inappropriate places in the main text.

Specifically, the exchange rate for the month of December 2017 (that is, 4/12/17 to 29/12/17) was used in the analysis. The study employed the ex post facto and descriptive research designs. The analysis confirms the existence of arbitrage opportunities in the foreign exchange market in Nigeria. Findings from the study also reveal that there is a clear net gain in the parallel market compared to the official government rates. The implication of this is that the effort of the government to attain a level of convergence between the parallel and official rates seems not to have yielded the desired result. The study makes the suggestion that the regulatory body (the Central Bank of Nigeria) keep making sporadic interventions in the foreign exchange market to address the unfavorable movement in the Nigerian naira that results in the emergence of arbitrage opportunities in the foreign exchange market. / Keywords: Arbitrage, Official Arbitrage Spread, Parallel Arbitrage Spread , Foreign Exchange Market, Nigeria / JEL CLASSIFICATION: G 12

It measures the relationship between a firm’s individual default probability and the joint default probability among firms. This study makes theoretical contributions by examining the degree of default correlation among non-financial listed firms in terms of credit quality, time horizon, systematic risk, firm size, and liquidity. The researcher selected 550 firm-year observations (240 for default and 310 for non-default) consisting of 55 non-financial listed companies in Sri Lanka from 2012 to 2021. The default firms are selected using the three criteria during the selection period: suffering from losses, having negative net worth, or suffering from negative operating cash flows for more than three consecutive years. The non-default firms are selected by a couple with the default firms based on the same industry and the highest market capitalization. Altman’s (1968) Z-score model is used to determine the credit ratings as high, medium, and low. The study follows Lucas’s (1995) proposed standard binomial approach to measure the default correlation. The study revealed that time horizon, poor credit ratings, high beta, and small size increase the default correlation in the Sri Lankan context; however, liquidity is not a good measurement for default correlation analysis in Sri Lankan context. Credit risk management could underestimate the portfolio credit risk without considering the default correlation. The dynamic nature of default correlation shows that an increment in default risk of individual credit assets engages with a disproportionate increment in portfolio credit assets. / Keywords: Bankruptcy Prediction, Credit Quality, Credit Risk Management, Default Correlation

Department of Economics, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Kelaniya, Sri Lanka. / senanik@kln.ac.lk / ORCID: https://orcid.org/0000-0002-5431-1141 / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1112401 / Public debt is a widely used macroeconomic concept in the economy. Given the resources required in development, the need to achieve minimum standards of living, and the urgency to alleviate poverty, governments may, at times, run up expenses that exceed their income. When governments face resource constraints, they often resort to borrowing to finance their expenditure plans. Debt sustainability has become a popular topic among countries with the advanced consequences of the recent global economic recession and debt crisis. The objective of this paper was to review existing literature on determinants of public debt sustainability. Public debt sustainability is an important element of overall fiscal development. Its impact also extends to the country's overall economy, including the monetary sector. Therefore, assessing the debt sustainability of a country is very important. Thus, this study examined the key fiscal and macroeconomic variables that affect debt sustainability and identified theoretical approaches. The papers were reviewed using a thematic approach, based on the available past literature related to the theoretical and empirical analysis of public debt sustainability. In this context, a comprehensive search of the literature published in English between 2000 and 2023 was conducted. The paper was reviewed by examining over twenty-seven research studies after the screening process was completed. Quantitative, qualitative, and mixed-methods study reports were also used. Previous literature highlighted that there is a positive relationship between public debt and macroeconomic variables. Therefore, the study determined that public debt sustainability influenced primary balance, economic growth, exchange rate, and real interest rate behavior. Furthermore, improvements in the macro-economic factors to increase revenue and minimize expenditure will also contribute to reducing the debt-to-GDP ratio. The government should try to formulate a strategic plan to develop a mechanism and debt-sustainable policy. Thereby, a country can ensure a sustainable debt level over the medium term. / Keywords: Debt Ratio, Economic Growth, Exchange Rate, Primary Balance, Public Debt Sustainability

<h3 style="text-align: center;">THE DETERMINANTS OF THE PUBLIC DEBT SUSTAINABILITY: A REVIEW</h3>Werake, W.M.M.S.KDepartment of Economics, Faculty of Social Sciences, University of Kelaniya, Sri Lanka.senanik@kln.ac.lkORCID: https://orcid.org/0000-0002-5431-1141ABSTRACTDOI : 10.57075/jaf1112401Public debt is a widely used macroeconomic concept in the economy. Given the resources required in development, the need to achieve minimum standards of living, and the urgency to alleviate poverty, governments may, at times, run up expenses that exceed their income. When governments face resource constraints, they often resort to borrowing to finance their expenditure plans. Debt sustainability has become a popular topic among countries with the advanced consequences of the recent global economic recession and debt crisis. The objective of this paper was to review existing literature on determinants of public debt sustainability. Public debt sustainability is an important element of overall fiscal development. Its impact also extends to the country's overall economy, including the monetary sector. Therefore, assessing the debt sustainability of a country is very important. Thus, this study examined the key fiscal and macroeconomic variables that affect debt sustainability and identified theoretical approaches. The papers were reviewed using a thematic approach, based on the available past literature related to the theoretical and empirical analysis of public debt sustainability. In this context, a comprehensive search of the literature published in English between 2000 and 2023 was conducted. The paper was reviewed by examining over twenty-seven research studies after the screening process was completed. Quantitative, qualitative, and mixed-methods study reports were also used. Previous literature highlighted that there is a positive relationship between public debt and macroeconomic variables. Therefore, the study determined that public debt sustainability influenced primary balance, economic growth, exchange rate, and real interest rate behavior. Furthermore, improvements in the macro-economic factors to increase revenue and minimize expenditure will also contribute to reducing the debt-to-GDP ratio. The government should try to formulate a strategic plan to develop a mechanism and debt-sustainable policy. Thereby, a country can ensure a sustainable debt level over the medium term.Keywords: Debt Ratio, Economic Growth, Exchange Rate, Primary Balance, Public Debt Sustainability

Natural resources in tourism centres are often not priced in the market, and underpricing may underestimate their value. Therefore, value estimation of natural resource-based tourist centres is vital to compare the benefits and costs associated with an ecosystem or natural resource. The main objective of this study is to assess the recreational value of Pinnawala Elephant Orphanage in Sri Lanka. This study used the tourism expenditure method based on data from 40 local tourists who visited the elephant orphanage in 2020. The estimated average consumer surplus was around LKR 33891, and the entertainment value was around LKR 2 billion. Therefore, Pinnawala Elephant Orphanage has a significant recreational value that helps attract more foreign exchange with required improvements in the centre. / Keywords: Pinnawala Elephant Orphanage, Travel Cost Method, Recreational Value, Consumer Surplus, Tourism Centers

The purpose of this study was to find out the effects of nonperforming loans on the profitability of commercial banks in Sri Lanka. The study used commercial banks registered and operational in Sri Lanka at Central Bank Sri Lanka in the year 2018. Profitability calculated by the return on assets is used as a dependent variable and as an independent variable, non-performing loans measured by non-performing loans ratio are used. Capital adequacy, operational efficiency, and liquidity are used as control variables to enhance the validity and accuracy of the tests. The control variables used are part of the CAMEL factors that also influence commercial banks' profitability. The study selected 11 commercial banks covering the period of 2014 to 2018. To analyze and draw conclusions and recommendations, the analysis also used secondary data. Descriptive Statistics, Multiple Linear Regression, and Pearson Correlation were used for data analysis and Stata has been used as statistical software to analyze the collected data. Findings indicated that there is a negative effect of the nonperforming loans ratio on return on assets, confirming that non-performing loans negatively affect the profitability of commercial banks in Sri Lanka. There is a positive and significant relationship between Return on Assets and Capital Adequacy. When considering the relationship between Return on Assets and Liquidity there is a positive insignificant relationship and there is a negative relationship between Return on Assets and Operational Cost Efficiency. This study concluded that the managers of Commercial banks in Sri Lanka have to work hard to enhance the profitability of commercial banks and reduce occurrences of nonperforming loans. This paper, therefore, provides insight to commercial banks, the central bank, and other stakeholders on the effect of nonperforming loans on the profitability of commercial banks in Sri Lanka and provides a basis for further research. / Keywords: Non-Performing Loans, profitability, Sri Lanka, Commercial banks.

I. / Department of Banking and Finance, Wayamba University of Sri Lanka / lakmalwai@wyb.ac.lk / ORCID: 0009-0008-1845-2431 / ABSTRACT / Employee turnover is a significant challenge for organizations worldwide, and it holds relevance for State Commercial Banks (SCBs) in Sri Lanka's Western Province. The economic crisis Sri Lanka faced last year exacerbated these issues, leading to decreased profitability across industries, including SCBs, and a surge in training and development costs. This study addresses a gap in the literature by exploring the factors influencing employee turnover within SCBs in this region. The research aims to examine the relationship between brand employment, candidate skills, job fitness, employee recognition, training and development, and compensation, and their impact on turnover rates. A quantitative research design was employed, using surveys distributed to SCB employees to gather data. The analysis, conducted through correlation and regression techniques, highlighted employee recognition, job fitness, and candidate skills as the most critical determinants of turnover, with recognition demonstrating the strongest influence. While the impact of brand employment, training and compensation were less significant. The findings suggest that to mitigate turnover, SCBs should prioritize enhancing employee recognition programs, ensuring better job fit during recruitment, and effectively managing candidate skills. Investments in training and development must be aligned with the organization's retention strategies. Additionally, SCBs need to project a strong employment brand and offer competitive rewards to attract and retain talent. This study provides practical insights to SCBs for developing more targeted strategies to reduce employee turnover, thereby improving organizational productivity. / Keywords: Employee Turnover, Compensation and Salary, Employment Brand, Candidate Skills, Employee Recognition

The process, which differs from person to person, is influenced by a variety of factors. While some people rely exclusively on intuition when making decisions, others use a number of factors to guide them toward the ideal choice. A multitude of factors, including market characteristics and individual risk profiles, are assumed to influence investment decisions. Investors are continuously looking for strategies to increase their earnings. The study's major goal was to look into the relationship between advocate recommendations and a firms' image and how they affect investment decisions in the Nepalese stock market. The current study uses a descriptive and analytical research design. The primary data is the most important source of information for analyzing and determining the study's outcome. An online Google form was used to collect required data utilizing a survey and structured questionnaire as research approach and instrument with a five-point Likert scale. The population of the study was Nepalese stock market investors. Researcher has selected 300 respondents using a judgmental sampling technique and provided a Google form. Out of them 86 people completed the survey and emailed it in. Eighty of them were correct. Mean, standard deviation, variance, independent sample t-test, and correlation were utilized in Excel and SPSS to analyze and interpret the collected data. According to the findings, advocate recommendations and firm image have a beneficial impact on investment decisions. Furthermore, there was no difference in advocate recommendations, firm image, and investment decisions across male and female in the Nepalese stock market.

The study also focuses on the difference in financial literacy levels between management and non-management undergraduates and between the various demographic factors. A random sample of 367 undergraduates from both management and non-management fields filled out a survey-based questionnaire. According to the analysis, financial literacy and the study's dimensions, financial knowledge, financial skills, financial attitudes, and financial behavior have a major and favorable influence on undergraduates' personal investment decision-making. Further, it found that there is a significant difference between the financial literacy level of management and non-management undergraduates; financial literacy is higher among management undergraduates than non-management undergraduates. Demographic factors such as gender, residence, academic year, and working experience were found to have no different impact on financial literacy. In contrast, only other educational qualifications have a significant impact on financial literacy. The study emphasizes how crucial financial literacy is in influencing investment choices and improving undergraduates' financial well-being since They will have high impact on the investment market in the future and the whole economy of the country. The differences in financial literacy levels between management and non-management undergraduates may help us understand the level of financial literacy among undergraduates. This study may also show why focused financial education programs are needed, especially for non-management students, to help them make better investment decisions. Additionally, it could inform policy recommendations for incorporating financial literacy into the university curriculum, promoting better financial decision-making among the youth in Sri Lanka. / Keywords: Financial Attitude, Financial Knowledge, Financial Skills, Financial Behavior, Personal Investment Decision-making

However, it is an expansion of the innovative reporting dimension by incorporating financial and non-financial information. Recently IR has been fascinating to many companies. As a result, many Sri Lankan businesses are adopting integrated reporting at various levels with the guidelines of the International Integrated Reporting Council (IIRC). Due to the voluntary approach of applying integrated reporting in Sri Lanka, the level of adoption of integrated reporting quality differs from one to another firm. When observing the individual annual reports of listed public companies in the Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE), some companies adopt well to the guidelines which are stated in the International Integrated Reporting Framework, On the other hand, some other listed public companies are not paid attention to the International Integrated Reporting guidelines and level of integrated reporting quality adequately. Hence it is important to realize the level and the quality of integrated reporting adoption of listed companies in Sri Lanka and how its disclosure level varies with the different firms' specific characteristics. Accordingly, the primary purpose of the study is to examine the impact of a firm's specific characteristics on the level of integrated reporting disclosure quality of listed companies in CSE. Beyond the theoretical suggestions, this study provides practical implications for different types of stakeholders who use the information to make different business decisions. / This study used data from 53 companies that are operating at CSE. Secondary data were gathered from the annual reports of selected companies for the period from 2017 to 2020. Profitability, financial leverage, ownership dispersion, board diversity, and board independence were used as the independent variables in the study. The Panel data regression model was employed to analyze data with E-Views software. The results showed that profitability and financial leverage variables are statistically significant and positively influenced the integrated reporting adoption level and quality of disclosures. Furthermore, the firm size has a big impact on the quality of integrated reporting implemented. The study's findings may be helpful to future scholars in this field and business decision-makers in gaining insight into the quality level of integrated reporting adoption already present in Sri Lankan listed companies in CSE and how it is affected by factors unique to the selected firms. / Keywords: Quality of Integrated Reporting, Firms' characteristics, Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE), International integrated reporting council (IIRC).

I. / Department of Banking and Finance, Faculty of Business Studies and Finance, Wayamba University of Sri Lanka / kanishkawithanage229@gmail.com, lakmalwai@wyb.ac.lk / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1022303 / The purpose of this study is to discover and analyze the impact of foreign exchange reserves on the living standards of Sri Lankan citizens. Export income, foreign debt, foreign remittances, and foreign reserves are employed as explanatory variables concerning Sri Lanka’s current crisis condition. The most widely used indicator of a country's standard of living is its gross national income (GNI) per capita, in this study the researcher primarily focuses on the income approach determinants of foreign reserves inflow to Sri Lanka. Therefore, to measure Sri Lankan citizens' living standards, the researcher employed the gross national income (GNI) per capita. The analysis utilizes data from 2001 to 2021 from the Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL), the International Monetary Fund (IMF), and the World Bank (WB). The unit-root test, correlation analysis, and regression analysis were employed to assess the time-series data. EViews version 9 statistical software was used to screen secondary quantitative data and analyze the study’s findings. The test results demonstrated that export income, foreign debt, and foreign reserves had a positive and significant effect on Sri Lankan citizens’ living standards, however, foreign remittances have no significant effect on Sri Lankan citizens’ living standards. It was a timely matter that drove the researcher to investigate how the lack of foreign reserves has an impact on the living standards of Sri Lankan citizens. This study is expected to help decision-makers manage forex reserves more efficiently and effectively, and more crucially, to raise the living standards of Sri Lankans. As a result, implementing a proper management system for foreign reserves will be a better source for employing the reserves to improve the country’s financial stability. Furthermore, the findings of this study will be helpful to the government in addressing present loopholes in the economy. This study will be a valuable source of direction for future scholars as they handle topical issues in emerging countries' economies associated with key eras. Researchers will profit from this research as well; as a result, they will be able to widen the existing empirical and theoretical review on the foreign reserves of developing countries such as Sri Lanka and their impact on citizens' living standards. / Keywords: Export Income, Foreign Debts, Foreign Reserves, Foreign Remittances, Living Standards of Sri Lankan Citizens

Thereby, this study is conducted to investigate the impact of Intellectual Capital and its components on the firm value in Consumer Service Sector and Capital Goods Sector companies listed in Colombo Stock Exchange (CSE) in Sri Lanka. The study is done as a comparison between these two sectors. It examined the data for the period from 2015 to 2020 based on the sample of 25 companies in Consumer Service Sector and 20 companies in Capital Goods Sector by usingtwo regression models in random effect. Dependent variable for the study is Firm value and independent variables are Intellectual capital, capital employed efficiency, human capital efficiency and structural capital efficiency. The measurement of the Intellectual capital is Value Added Intellectual Coefficient (VAIC) andmarketto book value (MB) is used as the measurement of the firm value of the companies in both sectors. The data gathered from both sectors is analyzed using descriptive statistics, correlation analysis and regression analysis. The results and findings of the study evident that, the intellectual capital has a positive impact on the firm value in both the consumer service sector and capital goods sector companies. However, when consider the component wise impact of intellectual capital, capital employed efficiency (CEE) has a positive impact on the firm value and human capital efficiency (HCE) and structural capital efficiency (SCE) have not a positive impact on firm value in both sectors. The findings of the study contribute to identify the impact of intellectual capital on the firm value in two sectors in the Sri Lanka economy. The results are significant for shareholders, owners, managers, employees, and all stakeholders. Especially, it is significant for the investors for their decisions on investments. In addition, companies could make investment decisions on Intellectual Capital to get competitive advantages and face market challenges and competition.

Different SMEs use financial knowledge in varying ways, which affects the performance of the businesses. This study sheds light on the Practices of management accounting used by SMEs in the manufacturing sector and how they affect Operational success. The Management accounting practices which are discussed in the study is, costing, performance evaluation, budgeting, strategic management accounting and decision support system. The data gathered was primary data, using a convenience sampling method in cross-sectional time horizon. And the deductive research methodology and the survey method were used in the research design. The Research was conducted using demographic analysis, correlation coefficient analysis, and regression analysis. The sample was taken from the small and medium-sized, 131 manufacturing enterprises in the Colombo district. The study found, the budgeting system, performance evaluation system, and strategic management accounting system to have a statistically significant impact on operational performance. Costing systems and Decision support systems were found to be not statistically significant in regression analysis. Therefore, 3 out of 5 hypotheses were accepted. As for concluding remarks, this study's findings recommend that using management accounting practices can enhance operational performance. Further, study suggests that budgeting, performance evaluation, and strategic management accounting be used by management to improve the operational performance of Manufacturing SMEs. The study thereby, hopes to increase the knowledge and awareness of students and professionals who are interested in this field. Additionally, this will provide insight on the management accounting techniques now employed by SME's and their level of financial literacy. Consequently, this study's valuable information can be used by government, organizations, and experts to advance the Small Medium Enterprises of Sri Lanka. / Keywords: Management accounting practices; Operations performance; Small medium enterprises; Manufacturing sector; Colombo district

The concept of microfinance has developed as a tool to obtain both financial and non-financial support for poor people's self-empowerment. Women who come from low-income families are given the ability to make a valuable contribution to the economy through the use of microfinance. In the Sri Lankan context, female labor force participation is comparatively at a lower level, and thus more women are economically inactive. Therefore, microfinance services are vital to low-income women in both rural and urban areas. Due to the vitality of this aspect, this research aims to examine the impact of microcredit, micro saving, financial training, and advisory services on women's economic empowerment in Sri Lanka. The population used in this research is microfinance women beneficiaries in Kurunegala District, and the researcher selected 380 microfinance women beneficiaries as the sample size of this study using random sampling technique. Data collection was conducted using structured, self-administered, web-based questionnaires and personal interviews, where the data set was analyzed using multiple linear regression analysis. The results of this research show that microcredit, micro savings, financial training, and advisory services significantly and positively impact women's economic empowerment. Accordingly, the researcher recommends microfinance institutions to increase the granting of microcredit facilities to poor women in the Kurunagala district, as these institutions have given less loan amounts than applied. Also, it is recommended to reduce interest rates and increase payback periods, as high interest rates are an additional burden on the customers. Furthermore, the government should pay more attention to these low-income women and conduct some programs to improve their knowledge and careers. Meanwhile, microfinance institutions should improve their management capacity and strive to reach out to women in need to enhance their economic empowerment and improve their contribution to the workforce and economy. / / Keywords: Micro Credit, Micro Saving, Financial Training, Advisory Service, Women's Economic Empowerment

    - Extracted text (content): THE IMPACT OF PORTFOLIO DIVERSIFICATION ON THE PROFITABILITY OF LICENSED COMMERCIAL BANKS IN SRI LANKA / .Menike, M.G.P.D / University of Peradeniya, Sri Lanka / menike@mgt.pdn.ac.lk / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1112407 / Licensed commercial banks are essential for ensuring the stability of any country's financial system. According to the 2022 annual report of the Central Bank of Sri Lanka (CBSL), licensed commercial banks collectively held fifty-five percent of total assets. Portfolio diversification stands as a fundamental strategy for mitigating risk and enhancing returns in the banking sector. Thus, this study aims to investigate the relationship between portfolio diversification and profitability within the realm of licensed commercial banks operating in Sri Lanka. The researcher set out to achieve two research objectives by examining the correlation between the diversification index and profitability. Return on Asset and Return on Equity were used as measurement criterion of profitability. The dependent variable, portfolio diversification, was measured using a diversification index derived from the Herfindahl-Hirschman Index (HHI). A sample of ten listed banks was selected out of twenty-four licensed commercial banks. Secondary data were collected from the annual reports of ten listed commercial banks for the period of 2012 – 2022. A fixed effect model was selected among panel data regression models after conducting the F test, LM test, and Hausman test. The study's findings indicate that the diversification index has an insignificant negative impact on ROA and a significant negative impact on ROE. The equity ratio of banks has a negative, insignificant impact on both ROA and ROE. Bank size has a significant and negative impact on both ROA and ROE. Therefore, the findings of the study demonstrate that diversification negatively impacts both ROA and ROE. The findings from this study hold significant implications for both banking institutions and policymakers in Sri Lanka. Understanding the relationship between portfolio diversification and profitability can inform strategic decision-making within banks, guiding them towards more effective risk management practices and resource allocation strategies. In essence, this study contributes to the existing literature by offering empirical evidence and theoretical insights into the impact of portfolio diversification on the profitability of licensed commercial banks in Sri Lanka. / Keywords : Asset -based diversification, Commercial banks, Diversification index Portfolio diversification, Profitability.

The theoretical model was constructed by combining the uses-and-gratifications theory with various aspects of social media marketing activities including entertainment, interaction, trendiness, and customization that has been revealed in previous empirical studies in digital and fashion industry. Quantitative analysis of survey responses from 384 females led to the determination of this research that all five social media marketing activities have a positive and significant influence on brand loyalty. The three factors in the order of strongest drivers were entertainment, interaction, and trendiness, while customization and electronic word- of-mouth were not too far behind. These findings impress upon the delivery of fun and interactive content, being updated about fashion trends, offering personal experience, and the use of positive word-of-mouth to reinforce brand loyalty among female fashion consumers of fashion goods. The insight herein provides valuable guidance to help fashion brands in improving their social media marketing initiatives and hence building relationships that will last long with their target audience. / Keywords: Social Media Marketing Activities, Brand Loyalty, Fashion industry, Female Fashion Consumers, Colombo District

The population under consideration in this research is the total number of companies selected for the best sustainability ratings in 2021. The study population comprised 66 companies, including financial and non-financial companies listed under the Colombo Stock exchange. The random sampling method is used for selecting the study sample. The sample comprises 45 non-financial companies in Sri Lanka that reported SRP disclosure information for six years during 2016-2021. This research used secondary data from the financial, annual, and sustainability reports issued by the companies. The independent variable is SRP, which consists of economic, environmental, and social indicators. The disclosure index of Sustainability reporting guidelines from GRI G4 and finally developed the sustainability reporting disclosure index (SRDI) use for him. The dependent variable is E.M., measured by discretionary accruals calculated using the Modified Jones Model. Descriptive statistics and panel regression analyses were used to analyse the information in the reports to recognise the impact of SPRs on E.M. Research results suggest that there is a significant negative impact of SRPs on E.M. practices in pre and during the Covid-19 period. Indeed, research evidence shows that companies with higher SRPs are less prone to advance E.M. practices. This study's findings indicate that all stakeholders can use earnings management practices and sustainability reporting disclosures as sources of information when making decisions. The outcomes of this research show that non-financial sustainability reporting information disclosures are linked with the financial details published by the firm, specifically in earnings management. The study's other implication is the importance of developing businesses for sustainability reporting disclosure and giving an assurance service for that purpose. / Keywords: Sustainability reporting, Earnings management, Global reporting initiatives, Modified Jones Model, Covid-19.

L. / Department of Banking and Finance, Faculty of Business Studies and Finance, Wayamba University of Sri Lanka / kanishkawithanage229@gmail.com / ABSTRACT / DOI : 10.57075/jaf1112406 / As the knowledge-based economy developed, businesses transformed their emphasis from physical to intellectual capital. Numerous studies have looked into how intellectual capital affects a company's value. The study's goal is to investigate, from 2010 to 2022, the connection between five licensed specialized banks' financial performance and their intellectual capital. The statements of comprehensive income and financial position for the pertinent years were the main sources of the data that were collected from the banks' annual reports available on their individual websites. The study's results were analysed and secondary quantitative data screened using EViews version 9 statistical software. The value-added intellectual coefficient method was used to measure the banks' performance based on their intellectual capital. The return on equity and return on assets are two indicators of the bank's performance. The value of intellectual capital was analyzed in three categories: structural, intellectual, and physical. Both simple and multiple regression techniques were used to assess the effect of intellectual capital on equity and assets. The study found a significant correlation between the value-added intellectual coefficient, its components, and financial performance. In both multiple regression models, the structural capital efficiency was statistically insignificant but positively correlated. Both multiple regression models showed statistical insignificance and negative correlation for the capital employed efficiency. Human capital efficiency was statistically significant and positively correlated in both multiple regression models. The most crucial value-added intellectual coefficient factor for generating value in Sri Lankan specialty banks operating in the banking industry is human capital efficiency. Additionally, this study will give stakeholders and possible investors some information to evaluate the value-creating potential of particular banks. The findings of the study help to increase decision-makers' understanding of the importance of intellectual capital as a crucial element that can enhance a business's ability to maintain its competitive position. This study is the first to examine the impact of intellectual capital on the financial performance of Sri Lankan licensed specialized banks through 2023. The study emphasizes how critical it is to investigate the relationship between intellectual capital and the banking industry's financial performance in greater detail. / Keywords: Intellectual Capital, Human Capital, Structured Capital, Capital Employed, Relational Capital, Financial Performance

Financial inclusion means that individuals and businesses have access to useful and affordable financial products and services that meet their needs, transactions, payments, savings, credit, and insurance delivered in a responsible and sustainable way. FI has been shown to reduce poverty, improve societal well-being, and promote more inclusive economic development. This research uses the panel data set for six selected countries from the South Asian region for a period from 2004 to 2021. The number of bank branches, outstanding loans from commercial banks, outstanding deposits with commercial banks, and the number of automated teller machines are used to measure financial inclusion, and the Human Development Index is used to measure economic development. This study used the descriptive statistical approach, unit root test, panel ARDL co-integration test, and pairwise Dumitrescu-Hurlin panel causality test to investigate the nexus between financial inclusion and economic growth in South Asia. The findings of this study indicate the existence of a long-run co-integration between financial inclusion and economic development in South Asian countries. Specifically, the number of bank branches, outstanding loans from commercial banks, and outstanding deposits with commercial banks exhibit a positive long-term relationship with economic development. Conversely, the number of automated teller machines (ATMs) demonstrates a negative long-term relationship with economic development. A main finding of the Dumitrescu-Hurlin Panel Causality Test shows that there is homogeneous Granger causality from outstanding deposits to the Human Development Index (HDI). The test does not find enough evidence to support a causal relationship between economic development and the other variables of financial inclusion, such as the number of bank branches, outstanding loans, and ATMs. This implies that, out of the four financial inclusion variables examined, only one demonstrates a causal relationship with human development in South Asia. Consequently, the study concludes that there is no significant causal relationship between financial inclusion and economic development in the region. / Keywords: Financial Inclusion, Economic Development, South Asia, Human Development, Causal Relationship

Thus, properly managed WMSs are essential to ensuring the good health and environmental quality of the nation. This study explored the contribution of the Central Environmental Authority (CEA), empowered through the National Environmental Act (NEA), in managing solid waste in Sri Lanka, mainly based on secondary data gathered from the CEA annual reports, corporate plans and websites, and NEA. Informal discussions and interviews were conducted with CEA officials for more details and clarifications. The data gathered was qualitatively analyzed using techniques: thematic analysis and content analysis. The study reveals that CEA, coordinating with provincial and district offices, contributes substantially to managing waste/ solid waste/ hazardous waste in Sri Lanka. Through legislation, CEA influences industrialists and takes actions to minimize the volume of waste and its polluting density from the initial stage before commencing high-medium-polluting industrial activities and large-scale projects. Similarly, by delegating power to local authorities (LAs), CEA assists in managing waste/solid waste from low-polluting industries and households. CEA is also involved in initiating and amending regulations, and implementing them to streamline waste management practices. Thus, CEA's role shows the importance of taking protective measures in advance to minimize the extent of waste and its pollution density. CEA has initiated large-scale waste management projects as well. The findings help relevant authorities take policy decisions, strategies, and actions to reform WMSs. In turn, these findings provide valuable insights for waste generators, collectors, and recyclers to be more attentive to their responsibilities, legal compliance, and potential for maintaining suitable WMSs. This study mainly focused on three divisions of CEA which are mostly related to waste management. Thus, it did not explore the role of other divisions of CEA and the difficulties/ challenges faced by related parties i.e., CEA, LAs, waste generators, collectors, and recyclers, in implementing waste management strategies and actions; all such unexplored areas are thus, exposed to future researchers. / Keywords: Central Environmental Authority, Environmental Legislation, Environmental Pollution, National Environmental Act, Solid Waste Management

Focusing on 25 high-performance firms from 2019 to 2023, the research examines how institutional, foreign, and managerial ownership influence CSR practices. Regression analysis is employed to assess these relationships. The findings reveal that both institutional and foreign ownership have a significant positive effect on CSR disclosure. Specifically, institutional investors, driven by a focus on long-term performance and sustainability, and foreign investors, motivated by global standards and regulatory compliance, push for more transparent and robust CSR practices. These ownership types are linked to greater CSR disclosure, measured through enhanced reporting on social and environmental issues, improved stakeholder communication, and adherence to international CSR frameworks. In contrast, managerial ownership shows a negligible impact on CSR disclosure, suggesting that managers may prioritize financial performance or other internal goals over CSR objectives. This study makes a unique contribution to the literature by demonstrating how different ownership structures directly influence CSR practices in emerging markets, such as Sri Lanka's insurance sector. It highlights that institutional and foreign ownership can drive improvements in corporate transparency, while managerial ownership may not be a significant catalyst for CSR engagement. The implications of these findings are particularly relevant for stakeholders, including policymakers, corporate managers, and investors. Policymakers should consider encouraging institutional and foreign ownership to foster stronger CSR practices. For corporate managers, aligning ownership structures with CSR goals can enhance both corporate reputation and long-term financial success. Investors, particularly institutional and foreign, can leverage their influence to ensure that companies prioritize CSR in line with global expectations. This research provides critical insights into the role of ownership in shaping CSR disclosure in emerging markets, contributing to the broader discourse on corporate governance and accountability. / Keywords: Ownership Structure Typology, Sri Lankan Insurance Sector, CSR reporting Standards

SOURCE FILE 08_visual_design_analysis.md

Visual Design Analysis

Evidence levels

- Configured: values stored in theme options or page-builder data.
- Source-defined: values and behaviors in the Kingster/GoodLayers templates and CSS.
- Not observed: rendered appearance could not be inspected because the configured FBSF domain did not open the FBSF site.

Configured colors, type sizes, container width, header, and footer tokens are listed in global design. The major source-defined values include a 1360px container with 20px side padding, 1140px boxed header/top bar, Poppins typography, navy/green palette, and a CSS responsive breakpoint at 999px.

All 156 published pages have a `gdlr-core-page-builder` payload. Their stored data includes background wrappers, columns, images, text boxes, headings, buttons, and specialized modules. There are 247 `background` nodes across the published page payloads. These are stored layout records, not a count of visually distinct sections in a rendered site.

Per-page widget types, section labels/text, image IDs, and builder settings are extracted in the page files. Homepage sections are summarized in homepage content.

Unmeasured visual properties

Actual page screenshots, pixel-level section/column dimensions, desktop/mobile spacing, box shadows, border radii, image crop positions, overlays, animation timing, and hover effects could not be verified against a live FBSF page. Treat any recreation of those details as requiring production screenshots or a functioning preview, not as measured facts in this audit.

SOURCE FILE 09_media_asset_inventory.md

Media Asset Inventory

The SQL backup has 1511 attachment posts; 883 physical files exist under wp-content/uploads. 1466 attachment records reference a file path absent from this local tree. Exact path comparison uses _wp_attached_file.

Verified local counts

- Images: 851 (.jpg: 822, .jpeg: 26, .png: 3).
- PDFs: 12.
- SVG uploads: 0.
- Kingster theme image-folder assets: 34 (24 JPG, 9 PNG, 1 GIF in the inspected tree).
- SVG files under wp-content: 2354; these are distributed across theme/plugin code and are not upload-library media records.
- Other upload files: 20; these are listed but not classified as media without context.

Physical uploads manifest

Dimensions are read from the local image header when supported, otherwise from attachment metadata. Aspect ratio is width/height. Stored GUID is a WordPress identifier and may not be a current canonical media URL. “Used on” is based on explicit attachment ID references or the attachment parent, not a visual page check.

Functionality and Interactions

Components found in source/data

The published-page GoodLayers payloads contain the following component types (counts are database nodes, not proof each rendered component is currently functional):

Component	Count	Notes
Revolution Slider	17	Page-builder modules; plugin active
Buttons	73	Stored button widgets
Contact Form 7 widget	1	Page-builder widget; plugin active
Course search	1	Course search widget; GoodLayers Course active
Blog widgets	9	Dynamic post listing modules
Event widgets	2	Events Calendar modules
Post slider	1	Dynamic post carousel/slider module
Accordions	3	GoodLayers module
Galleries	6	GoodLayers gallery module
Tabs	2	GoodLayers module
Videos	1	GoodLayers video module
Personnel widgets	8	Staff/directory modules
Custom-menu widgets	11	Menu modules
Other source-defined modules	Various	See widget counts in the generated page records

The SQL snapshot also contains 11 published WPForms form posts, one published Contact Form 7 form, and one published WP User Frontend form. Form submission was deliberately not attempted. The records do not establish which forms are embedded, enabled, or reachable in the live site.

Header and site-wide interactions

- Desktop and mobile menu locations use menu ID 120 according to theme settings.
- Kingster source supports menu dropdowns and mobile hamburger navigation.
- Search is enabled in the theme options; search results were not tested.
- Sticky navigation and sticky mobile navigation are configured on.
- A Google Maps iframe is stored in a footer widget.
- Contact links in the footer widget are an email address and telephone text.
- Download links, external links, and builder-authored actions are itemized where extractable in page files.

Reproduction considerations

Elementor can reproduce ordinary menus, search forms, buttons, galleries, accordions, tabs, and text/image sections. Revolution Slider, GoodLayers course search, event modules, personnel listings, and specialized database-backed layouts require an equivalent plugin, custom widget, or a deliberate content migration. The audit does not submit forms or change external systems.

SOURCE FILE 11_responsive_design_analysis.md

Responsive Design Analysis

Available evidence

No FBSF page could be viewed at the requested desktop, laptop, tablet, or mobile viewports. The live-domain HTTPS request failed certificate validation, and HTTP redirected to an unrelated ASBIRES site. Consequently, no responsive behavior or overflow issue is presented as browser-observed.

The Kingster theme includes a dedicated mobile-header template and responsive CSS. Source/options establish:

- CSS media-query breakpoint at `max-width: 999px` in generated theme CSS.
- Mobile header wrapper and mobile menu button (`header/header-mobile.php`).
- Top bar enabled on mobile.
- Mobile logo left aligned, max width 180px.
- Mobile sticky navigation enabled.
- Main menu and mobile menu both point to menu ID 120.
- Search control is included in mobile header source and enabled in settings.
- Theme provides responsive visibility controls in GoodLayers page-builder data; inspect each page's responsive settings before reproducing.

Required validation after access is restored

At 1440x900, 1366x768, 768x1024, 390x844, and 360x800, verify menu collapse, menu interactions, logo sizing, content stacking, builder column behavior, image crop, font scaling, table overflow, forms, sliders, footer stacking, and horizontal overflow. Compare actual rendered results with the stored builder settings rather than assuming mobile is a scaled desktop.

SOURCE FILE 12_wordpress_architecture.md

WordPress Architecture

Core and theme

- The local core declares WordPress version 7.1.4 in `wp-includes/version.php`.
- Active theme options in the backup set both `template` and `stylesheet` to `kingster`.
- Theme source is at `wp-content/themes/themes/kingster`; its header identifies Kingster 2.0.0 by Goodlayers. No `wp-content/themes/kingster` directory exists in this local tree, so the selected theme name and conventional direct theme path do not match the extracted source layout.
- The theme registers `main_menu`, `right_menu`, `top_bar_menu`, and `mobile_menu` locations; it supports featured images, post formats, HTML5 markup, and title tags.
- Header/footer, archive, single, page, search, and WooCommerce templates are present.

Active plugins recorded in the database

The backup lists 26 active plugins: Advanced noCaptcha reCAPTCHA, Capability Manager Enhanced, Contact Form 7, Duplicate Page, Elementor Pro, Elementor, GoodLayers Core, GoodLayers Course, GoodLayers Personnel, GoodLayers Portfolio, GoodLayers Twitter, Real3D Flipbook, Revolution Slider, Snazzy Maps, The Events Calendar, WP File Manager, WP Google Map, WP Mail SMTP, WP Meta and Date Remover, WPF Drop Uploader, WPForms, WPForms Form Abandonment, WPForms Form Locker, WPForms Form Pages, WPForms Geolocation, and WPForms Post Submissions.

This is the active-plugin option in the SQL snapshot, not an independent verification of runtime activation or plugin compatibility. The `advanced-nocaptcha-recaptcha` plugin is named in that option, but its directory is absent from the local `wp-content/plugins` tree. Together with the nested Kingster source path, this is a mismatch between the SQL configuration and extracted local package; it does not establish which components are deployed or active on the hosted site.

Content model in the SQL snapshot

The database contains standard pages and posts, media attachments, nav-menu items, GoodLayers custom post types (`course`, `personnel`, `portfolio`), The Events Calendar event/venue/organizer types, Elementor library entries, and form records. See dynamic content for counts and taxonomies.

GoodLayers data is stored in the `gdlr-core-page-builder` and `gdlr-core-page-option` post-meta keys. Elementor metadata and library records also exist. These are separate builder formats; GoodLayers data is not automatically Elementor-compatible.

The database has sidebar widgets for `footer-1` through `footer-4`, multiple GoodLayers sidebars, and inactive widgets. The selected Kingster footer layout determines which footer widget areas are rendered.

No database write, source-file change, form submission, or settings change was performed for this audit.

SOURCE FILE 13_goodlayers_and_page_builder_analysis.md

GoodLayers and Page-Builder Analysis

Stored page-builder formats

- Every published page (156/156) has `gdlr-core-page-builder` metadata in the backup.
- The same builder data is serialized PHP arrays, not Elementor JSON.
- Published pages contain 247 GoodLayers `background` wrapper nodes and 2,331 total typed builder nodes (including wrappers, columns, and elements).
- Page-level settings are stored under `gdlr-core-page-option`, including header/title/breadcrumb/footer toggles, sidebar settings, and title-background values.
- Elementor `_elementor_data` is present on 9 published pages; `_elementor_edit_mode` is present on 15. The backup also contains four published `elementor_library` records.

Common stored element types

Columns (844), text boxes (401), images (306), title modules (180), buttons (73), dividers (48), call-to-action elements (40), stunning-text elements (30), icon lists (17), and Revolution Slider modules (17) are among the most frequent nodes. Less common modules include events, blog, course search, accordions, tabs, galleries, personnel, video, timeline, custom menu, and contact form.

These are counts of serialized records, including nested elements; they are not counts of unique screen regions or verified runtime widgets.

Migration guidance

1. Keep the SQL backup read-only and preserve the original builder metadata.
2. Use generated per-page records to inventory widget trees, exact stored text, linked media IDs, and page options.
3. Rebuild ordinary structures with Elementor containers, headings, text, images, buttons, accordions, tabs, and galleries.
4. Replace data-driven GoodLayers modules with equivalent dynamic templates or custom post-type widgets.
5. Reconstruct Revolution Slider slides from their own slider records/assets; a widget reference alone is insufficient to reproduce slide content.
6. Validate mobile visibility, section backgrounds, spacing, and template-specific header/footer options after import.

No GoodLayers-to-Elementor conversion is performed by this audit.

Dynamic Content Analysis

This section lists published records in the SQL snapshot. There are 164 published records across the types shown below. Full stored text/links and builder metadata are documented in the individual linked record files.

Content types

Type	Count	Source/role
post	72	WordPress posts (news, updates, newsletter, publications)
course	10	GoodLayers Course custom post type personnel	66	GoodLayers Personnel custom post type portfolio	9	GoodLayers Portfolio custom post type tribe_events	2	The Events Calendar event records tribe_venue	2	The Events Calendar venue records tribe_organizer	2	The Events Calendar organizer records
wpjournal-article	1	Journal article record

Repeated content structures

- Posts/news: title, date, slug, excerpt, body, featured image, category/tag relationships, and stored meta where present.
- Courses: title/body and course category/tag; associated taxonomies include campus, department, instructor, semester, level, credit, and method.
- Personnel: name/title, body/meta, featured image, personnel category, and department relationships.
- Portfolio: title/body, featured image, portfolio category and tag.
- Events: title/body plus event dates, venue, organizer, URL, and cost fields where stored.
- Journals/publications: standard posts and journal pages/issues; preserve original PDF/download URLs and issue/category relationships.

Form records (not submitted)

The database contains 11 published WPForms post records, 1 published Contact Form 7 form record(s), and 1 published WP User Frontend form record(s). These counts do not prove that each form is embedded or available to site visitors.

SEO and Accessibility

SEO evidence

- The backup records the public home/site URL and `/%postname%/` permalink structure.
- AIOSEO-related tables/cache exist, but AIOSEO is not present in the active-plugin list stored in the backup.
- The `postmeta` table contains AIOSEO title, description, keyword, Open Graph, and Twitter metadata on six records. This does not establish that the metadata is currently output on live pages.
- Page titles and content are stored in the posts table; the per-page index records page slugs and statuses.
- No complete runtime crawl, canonical/link validation, robots directive inspection, structured-data validation, or live sitemap check was possible.

Accessibility evidence and gaps

- Theme source includes a viewport meta tag and a skip-to-content pattern is not verified for FBSF output.
- Kingster registers HTML5 search, comment, gallery, and caption support.
- Builder image alt text is stored in attachment metadata where available; see the media inventory.
- Some homepage builder images contain empty inline `alt` attributes. This is a source-record finding, not a complete audit of rendered images.
- The stored footer Google Maps iframe has no `title` attribute. Add an accessible name if the embed is retained.
- Keyboard navigation, focus visibility, contrast ratios, accessible names, form labels/errors, and screen-reader output were not tested.

Follow-up validation

Inspect the hosted site's rendered head and markup; confirm titles/descriptions/canonicals/robots/structured data; crawl internal and external links; check each image's meaningful alt text; and keyboard-test menus, carousels, accordions, tabs, search, and forms. Avoid treating stored metadata as proof of output.

Technical Performance Analysis

What was inspected

The backup and local files show WordPress core, the Kingster theme, generated CSS, GoodLayers builder modules, Elementor assets, and multiple active plugins. There are 883 physical files under `wp-content/uploads`, including 851 images and 12 PDFs. The database references 1,511 attachment records, with 1,466 stored original paths absent from the local uploads tree.

What was not measured

No valid FBSF runtime page was available. Therefore this audit reports no page-load timing, Core Web Vitals, response size, image transfer size, browser-console errors, failed network requests, cache headers, mobile performance score, or broken-link count.

The local filesystem contains images in JPG/JPEG/PNG and PDF files. Image optimization, modern-format delivery, lazy-loading, font-display behavior, caching, minification, and third-party script runtime behavior must be checked on the actual deployment.

Reconstruction priorities

- Recover missing originals before recreating image-heavy pages.
- Identify which slider assets and third-party embeds are still needed.
- Avoid importing inactive/unused plugins solely because they appear in historical content.
- Measure the reconstructed site on the target hosting and representative mobile devices.

Elementor Reconstruction Specification

Foundation

- Create global site settings from the configured tokens in global design: Poppins, navy `#192f59`, accent green `#3db166`, 1360px content container, 20px side padding.
- Build reusable global header and footer templates using the verified menu and footer-widget structure.
- Configure pages/posts with the source slugs and parent/status information in the sitemap.
- Keep original media IDs, paths, URLs, alt text, and missing-file status from the media inventory; do not substitute unrelated images.
- Use Elementor containers with mobile-first responsive controls. Do not assume legacy GoodLayers column settings map one-to-one.

Global header template

Use a white boxed container with the FBSF logo, primary menu (database menu ID 120), search control, and mobile hamburger. The stored Kingster configuration specifies plain/solid styling, 1140px header width, sticky desktop/mobile navigation, left mobile logo, and a 180px mobile logo limit. Top-bar text/social values are empty or unassigned in the backup; confirm production before adding content.

Global footer template

Use a dark three-column layout, preserving the existing source order:

1. White logo and faculty address/telephone/email.
2. `Our University` custom menu.
3. Google Maps embed.

Use the configured dark background and text colors. Preserve copyright as separate left/right content only after verifying the stored values and live display.

- Homepage: 7 stored GoodLayers background sections. Rebuild the Revolution Slider/hero; 4-column feature strip; News & Updates/Events/Newsletter area; faculty introduction and vision/mission; four service cards; Dean's Message; and course search. Exact extracted section content is in `07_page_by_page_content/homepage.md`.
- Standard content pages: use a page template with optional title/breadcrumb area driven by each page's `gdlr-core-page-option`; place source text and original media in the same section order.
- Department/staff pages: use dynamic personnel listings filtered by source department/personnel categories, plus department-specific navigation.
- News: use a post archive/single template with title, date, category, featured image, excerpt, body, and pagination where present.
- Courses: use a course archive/detail template with source course fields and department, campus, level, instructor, semester, credit, and method taxonomies.
- Events: use a calendar/archive and event detail template only if the two stored event records remain in scope.

- Journals/publications: preserve journal landing pages, issue/category relationships, and original PDF/download links.

Widget mapping and non-native dependencies

Source module	Elementor approach
Text, title, image, button, divider	Native Elementor widgets
Accordion, tabs, gallery	Native widgets after confirming interaction and content
Blog/post slider	Elementor Loop Grid/Carousel or equivalent
Course search	Custom widget or course-filter plugin; preserve taxonomies
Personnel listing	Loop Grid/query filtered by personnel taxonomy
Events	Events Calendar-compatible widgets/templates
Revolution Slider	Keep plugin or reconstruct each slide from original slider data/assets
Contact Form 7/WPForms	Rebuild form only after confirming current form definition and required integrations
Custom menu / map	Nav Menu widget and accessible map/embed treatment

The source contains both GoodLayers and Elementor data. No automatic conversion is assumed.

Final Website Reconstruction Blueprint

Build sequence

1. Restore evidence: obtain a current WordPress export and all original media; match attachment paths and IDs before design work.
2. Foundation: create an Elementor-compatible theme setup with the verified Kingster global palette/type/layout values, and implement accessible global header/footer templates.
3. Content model: preserve standard posts/pages and create dynamic models for courses, personnel, portfolios, and events only where those records are confirmed to remain in use.
4. Navigation: build the `Main Navigation` hierarchy from menu ID 120 and verify the 19 menu definitions against owner-confirmed locations.
5. Homepage: implement the seven source-defined homepage sections, retaining original slider assets, exact text, image IDs, links, and section backgrounds.
6. Page migration: use the generated sitemap and page files to recreate every required page, maintaining parent hierarchy, slugs, exact text, media links, and per-page title/breadcrumb/footer options.
7. Dynamic templates: create news, course, staff, journal/download, and event templates with source taxonomies and pagination/filter behavior.
8. Interactions: re-create search, menus, sliders, galleries, accordions, tabs, forms, map embeds, and downloads. Test without sending production submissions.
9. Quality assurance: compare production screenshots at the five requested viewport sizes, run link/SEO/accessibility checks, test forms in a safe staging environment, and measure performance.

Non-negotiable reconstruction constraints

- Do not substitute unrelated media.
- Do not treat serialized GoodLayers data as Elementor data.
- Do not infer missing visual values or content.
- Keep migration reversible until text, links, asset references, and dynamic content are reconciled.
- Base publication decisions on current owner confirmation; the SQL contains draft, private, and trashed page records.

The largest blocker to a faithful rebuild is not the Elementor implementation itself: it is the inability to verify the current live site and the large gap between database attachment paths and local original media files.

Missing Information and Issues

Access and source limitations

1. The FBSF HTTPS endpoint failed browser certificate-name validation. HTTP redirected to an unrelated ASBIRES site. Live page content, header/footer rendering, responsive behavior, links, forms, and visual details remain unverified.

2. The database backup is dated 2026-10-26; it may not represent the live deployment.

3. The active theme option is `kingster`, but the matching theme source exists only at `wp-content/themes/themes/kingster`; the conventional `wp-content/themes/kingster` directory is absent. The active-plugin option names `advanced-nocaptcha-recaptcha`, but that plugin directory is absent locally. These are local package/configuration mismatches; hosted deployment status is unknown.

4. The root-level legacy documentation Markdown and PDF are absent from the working tree. The staged Markdown index was inspected read-only, but its referenced `website_documentation/` files are absent; the staged PDF was not extracted. The staged files were left unchanged.

5. No connected hosted WordPress database was queried; the SQL backup is the only inspected database source.

Asset gaps

• The database has 1,511 attachment records; 1,466 referenced original attachment paths are missing from the local uploads tree.

• Only 883 files are physically present under uploads (851 images, 12 PDFs, 20 other files).

• The configured header logo (`logo-3.png`, attachment 6103), footer white logo (`FBSF_logo_white.png`, attachment 6106), and several homepage images are among the missing originals. Stored dimensions do not replace the original image files.

• A missing original may block exact reproduction of logos, hero images, staff portraits, galleries, and downloadable documents. The full row-level inventory is in media assets.

• Verify all original-image paths, attachments, captions, alt text, PDFs, slider assets, and external media against a current production backup.

Data and visual issues

• All published pages have GoodLayers payloads, and nine also have Elementor data. Preserve both formats during migration until their live use is determined.

• Menu definitions include empty/unassigned menus; a stored menu is not evidence that users can see it.

• Only six records contain AIOSEO post metadata; runtime SEO output is unverified.

• Some builder content has empty image alt attributes.

• No pixel-accurate widths, heights, image crops, hover states, mobile layout, form outcomes, page speed, or console/network results could be measured.

Required owner confirmations

• Provide a valid current FBSF preview or corrected DNS/certificate endpoint.

• Supply a current database and full uploads/slider archive.

• Confirm which menu locations, forms, posts, people, courses, and event records are current.

- Confirm whether GoodLayers modules must be retained or can be replaced during Elementor migration.
- Confirm final header/footer text and current official contact details.
